UNESCO Clubs:
For a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence
A Practical Guide
FOREWORD & ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Kenya joined UNESCO in 1964 as the 73rd member of the organization. In fulfilment of Article VII of UNESCO’s Constitution which calls for the establishment of National Commissions, the Government of Kenya established the Kenya National Commission for UNESCO through a Cabinet Decision number 170 of March 1964. The Commission was placed under the Ministry of Education Science and Technology with the Minister as its Chairman and also responsible for UNESCO activities in the country.

The Kenya National Commission for UNESCO (KNATCOM) became a State Corporation in January 2013 through an Act of Parliament—the Kenya National Commission for UNESCO Act 2013. The Act established the Commission as a corporate body, streamlined its administration, functions and outlined the responsibilities of Government ministries, departments, agencies and civil society organizations and individuals interested in the activities of UNESCO. The Commission ensures that Kenya contributes to the national and international agenda in the five areas of UNESCO’s competence namely: Education, Natural Sciences, Social and Human Sciences, Culture, Information and Communication.

The KNATCOM’s vision is to be “a leading organization in the advancement of peace, sustainable development and intellectual collaboration.” Its mission is to “promote building of peace, eradication of poverty, sustainable development and intellectual dialogue through education, sciences, culture, communication and information”.

The Commission’s mandate fits into Kenya’s Vision 2030, as the aim of Kenya’s Vision 2030 is to “create a globally competitive and prosperous country with a high quality of life of its citizens by 2030”.

The Kenyan Vision 2030 anchored on three key pillars: Economic, Social and Political, is well addressed by the Kenyan National Commission for UNESCO programmes and activities. The aim of the Commission is to contribute to the transformation of Kenya in positive and constructive ways through its programmes and activities. KNATCOM’s Strategic Plan 2014-2018 is aligned with and seeks to advance the spirit of the Constitution of Kenya 2010, the Kenya Vision 2030’s Second Medium Term Plan and its theme: “Transforming Kenya: Pathway to Devolution, Socio-Economic Development, Equity and National Unity.”

The KNATCOM intends to sensitize stakeholders on the importance of establishing UNESCO Clubs by launching the Kenyan Federation of UNESCO Clubs, Centers and Associations to promote the ideals of peace and sustainable development.
There is a need to foster peace, tolerance, cohesion and sustainable development, through the platform provided by UNESCO Clubs both at the national and international levels.

The KNATCOM will contribute towards the realization of Vision 2030 by promoting a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for sustainable development through the UNESCO Clubs network in Kenya. The UNESCO Clubs concept has been identified as a Vision 2030 flagship project in the 2015/2016 Financial Year. The KNATCOM expresses deep appreciation to Mr Mohamed Djelid, Director UNESCO (Nairobi) Regional Office for Eastern Africa for their financial and technical support. Sincere thanks also goes to the Ministry of Education Science and Technology (MoEST) and the National Cohesion and Integration Commission (NCIC) for their technical input for the launch of the Kenya federation of UNESCO Clubs.

Wish every success to all in our collaborative efforts for sustainable development in fulfilment of the 2030 agenda, through the network of UNESCO Clubs at the national and international levels for a culture of peace and non-violence.

WHAT IS UNESCO?

UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, a specialized agency of the United Nations was founded on 16 November 1945.

UNESCO functions as a laboratory of ideas and a standard-setter to forge universal agreements on emerging ethical issues. The Organization also serves as a clearing house – for the dissemination and sharing of information and knowledge – while helping Member States to build their human and institutional capacities in diverse fields.

In short, UNESCO promotes international co-operation among its 193 Member States (as of September 2008) and six Associate Members in the fields of Education, Science (Natural Sciences and Social and Human Sciences), Culture and Communication.
WHAT ARE UNESCO CLUBS?

1. Definition

A global grass-roots movement, Clubs for UNESCO support UNESCO priorities by using a community’s own experience, skills and outlook to foster peace and exchange. They consist of groups of people from all ages, from all walks of life and every background who share a firm belief in UNESCO’s ideals as set out in its Constitution (see Annex ii).

Although they have features in common, Clubs for UNESCO may take many different forms; the nature of a Club is determined by its membership and by the conditions and social environment in which it is called upon to operate.

Clubs for UNESCO fall into four main categories:

- Clubs established in schools (whose members are pupils and teachers in educational institutions) are at present in the majority.

- Clubs operating in universities and higher educational institutions are the natural sequel to school Clubs and they are growing steadily in numbers and are often established through the initiative of student groups.

- Clubs not intended specifically for schoolchildren or students but for a wider membership. These Clubs have a clearly recognized legal status, and their membership includes leading members of the cultural and public service circles of the community.

- Centres for UNESCO differ from the aforementioned Clubs and Associations for UNESCO because they operate on a permanent basis in premises usually open to the general public. They are staffed by specialized staff.

"Civil society is now so vital to the United Nations that engaging with it well is a necessity, not an option."

(Extract from the Cardoso Report on UN-Civil Society Relations, entitled “We the Peoples: civil society the United Nations and global governance”, United Nations, 11 June 2004) personnel who most often work on a remunerative basis. They have relatively sizeable, and often considerable, financial resources derived from a variety of sources (governments, municipalities, foundations, groups of sponsors).

It would be tedious to try to enumerate the various sectors of the community in which Clubs for UNESCO have been or can be formed; the richness of the movement is due precisely to its flexibility and to the wide variety of possible settings for its work.

The primary purpose of the Clubs is to develop understanding and support for UNESCO and its programmes. They seek to disseminate UNESCO’s ideals and undertake activities directly inspired by those of the Organization, broaden cultural horizons and provide an invaluable service to UNESCO and to the National Commissions for UNESCO in supplementing public information activities. The Clubs respect the founding principles of UNESCO and are non-profit making. They are also legally and financially independent from UNESCO.

2. Historical Background

The very first Club was set up in Sendai, Japan in 1947 even before Japan became a Member State of UNESCO in 1951. This Club is an example of a grassroots initiative becoming an integral part of a larger forum for solidarity as this initiative was created from the ruins of the post-war period and later grew spontaneously by people from several countries sharing a commitment to civic awareness.

The enthusiasm and speed at which these Clubs emerged was astounding. In a mere few months following UNESCO’s founding, a popular movement had been established. Over 100 Clubs were

A peace based exclusively upon political and economic arrangements of governments would not be a peace which could secure unanimous, lasting and sincere support from people of the world and that the peace must therefore be founded, if it is not to fail, upon the intellectual and moral solidarity of mankind.

(UNESCO Constitution)
UNESCO cannot achieve its ambitious objectives alone. It is fortunate to have a vast and unparalleled range of constituencies, partners and networks that are eager to be involved in its work: governmental and non-governmental, public and private partners, which combine their competencies and resources around a single goal owing to the presence and approval of UNESCO.

(UNESCO’s Medium-Term Strategy 2008-2013)

already in existence on 4 November 1949 when Mr Jaime Torres Bodet, then Director-General of UNESCO during a lecture commemorating the third anniversary of the founding of UNESCO, appealed for the creation of UNESCO Clubs in secondary schools and universities.

Following this appeal, the movement of UNESCO Clubs has been steadily expanding throughout the world. Today, there are UNESCO Clubs in over 100 countries.

3. Raison d’être of UNESCO Clubs

The premise for the Clubs was drawn from the Preamble of the UNESCO Constitution which states that “a peace based exclusively upon political and economic arrangements of governments would not be a peace which could secure unanimous, lasting and sincere support from people of the world” without calling upon local residents to cooperate and learn from one another both domestically and internationally.

Beyond political leaders and policy-makers, this movement exemplifies how ordinary citizens can influence decision-makers. These Clubs are pioneers in building sustainable bridges within civil society.
But how are these people to be associated with the construction of peace that, just after the Second World War, was felt to be urgently necessary and has not become less so in a world where people are still in conflict with each other?

How can they be made to respond to the notion of the intellectual and moral solidarity of mankind that was recognized by the founders of UNESCO as the basis for such peace?

It was the people who spontaneously found an answer to these questions by joining together in UNESCO Clubs, the very name of which clearly expressed their commitment to the Organization’s ideals and their wish to play a part in making them a reality.
III- WHY CREATE A UNESCO CLUB?

1. Aims and Roles of Clubs for UNESCO

The main objective of UNESCO is “to contribute to peace and security in the world by promoting collaboration among nations through Education, Science, Culture and Communication in order to further universal respect for justice, for the rule of law and for the human rights and fundamental freedoms which are affirmed for the peoples of the world, without distinction of race, sex, language or religion (...).” (UNESCO Constitution, Article I)

So, why a Club?

The Clubs were born of individual initiative: from the beginning to the present day they have been set up in answer to a widespread feeling among their members of the need to participate more actively in international life, in harmony with UNESCO’s approach and within its fields of competence. Their activities are directed towards the ideals set forth in the Preamble to the UNESCO Constitution.

We can summarize the aims of Clubs for UNESCO as follows:

- To promote understanding of the aims and ideals of UNESCO and work for the success of their implementation;
- To facilitate international understanding, cooperation and world peace;
- To support human rights;
• To contribute to the training in civics and democracy of their members;

• To participate in social development conceived as the attainment of the conditions most conductive to the full development of the human personality.

Each Club is free, of course, to decide that any one of these aims should be given priority over the others. It stands to reason that the major aims outlined above can be formulated differently or that Clubs can add other aims, of a variant nature or simply less general in scope.

However widely Clubs for UNESCO may differ from country to country, they are in each case the creation of people who share the aims and ideals of UNESCO and resolved to act together to assist in their realization.

2. Three main functions

While activities may vary from one Club to another, the function of a Club may be simply summed up as follows: Training, Dissemination of Information and Action.

Training

Value of UNESCO Clubs does not lie simply in the knowledge it helps to impart but also in its training role, in the self-education of its members through their participation in its activities. The Clubs do not provide training for their members alone; they also seek to contribute to the education of those around them. Training can take the form of studying basic UN and UNESCO documents such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Constitution of UNESCO in order to grasp the fact that what these organizations say and do is of direct concern to them.
Most of the Clubs arrange visits, excursions and tours for the twofold purpose of giving participants a more concrete idea of economic, social and cultural conditions (visits to industrial centres, dams, model farms, training centres, monuments, museums, artists’ studios), and providing opportunities for personal contacts between people from different backgrounds or different countries.

Training can also take the following form: participation in international conferences, especially in those dealing specifically with matters relating to Clubs for UNESCO, through information seminars designed for members of National Commissions in various regions; international exchanges enabling Club leaders to obtain practical experience in countries where the Clubs are particularly active. UNESCO does its utmost to promote such exchanges. It also welcomes leaders from National Federations or Clubs wishing to become more familiar with its working methods and programme, either at its Headquarters or Regional Offices.

Dissemination of Information

A basic purpose of a UNESCO Club is to increase awareness. Clubs obtain and disseminate factual data about national and world problems, the activities of international organizations, the activities of the Club itself and so on. Club members are outward-looking, aware of the message they have to communicate and mindful of the role they can play in stimulating the interest of their family, their acquaintances, their colleagues and, more broadly, their community. Clubs publish documents promoting literacy, environmental conservation and preservation of cultural heritage, for example, in their own national and local languages.
To carry out their task of providing information, the Clubs collect documentation on UNESCO and the United Nations. In order to obtain these documents, they organize exchanges with other Clubs and also apply to UNESCO, the United Nations Information Centres, embassy cultural services, tourist offices, the documentation centres of National Commissions for UNESCO and Federations and Clubs for UNESCO in other countries. The majority of Clubs, however, do not merely collect information material, but produce it themselves.

Some Clubs make translations into their own language of outstanding educational works, UNESCO documents, or sound-tracks of documentary films produced by UNESCO, etc.

Associated with such dissemination activities are Clubs’ efforts to make UNESCO publications more widely known by various means, and share the bulletins produced by various Federations and Clubs that usually comprise information about the activities and actions and initiatives undertaken by different clubs as a means to share ideas and possible collaboration.

Action

However widely Clubs may differ from country to country, they are in all cases, as we have seen, the creation of people attracted by the aims and ideals of UNESCO and resolved to act together to assist in their realization.

This is the essential condition for the existence of a Club dissemination: Although the first two functions, training and information are necessary, they cannot be considered sufficient, and any Club that confined itself to them would to some extent be failing in its mission. Furthermore, they do not take on their full value unless they do lead to action.

The members of the Clubs must therefore make a close study of the aims and ideals they wish to serve; to this end, it will be useful for them to read not only the Constitution of UNESCO, the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights but also, in a wider context, the basic literature on international organizations and their objectives, in order to grasp the fact that what these organizations say and do is of direct concern to them. Of course this initial contact is not enough: while it is necessary to return fairly frequently to the sources - chiefly for the benefit of newly recruited members - the Club must also draw up a programme.

To begin with, this very flexible programme can be in broad outline only. There will always be time to add to it in the light of current events, circumstances, opportunities, proposals by a neighbouring Club, suggestions from supporters, the readiness of prominent people to accept an invitation to address the Club, the availability of documentary material, action taken by the National Commission for UNESCO, the National Federation of Clubs for UNESCO or the World Federation and the priorities adopted by the UNESCO General Conference.

As may be dictated by its local resources, financial means and the preference of its members, each Club can select some of the following activities:

- Lectures and debates: seminars and study days, symposiums and meetings designed to develop an awakening of interest in UNESCO, its mission and work;

- Participation in International Days, Weeks, Years and Decades proclaimed by the UN and UNESCO and Celebrations of Anniversaries with which UNESCO is associated (see Annex iii);

- Gathering, publishing and distributing of information material;

- Organization of cultural activities (i.e. exhibitions, drawing or photography competitions):

- Organization of youth camps;

- Excursions and study tours; exchanges between Clubs.
3. From local community to the world

At the local level

Within their local community, the members of Clubs for UNESCO are Ambassadors for UNESCO who can raise awareness and develop knowledge about UNESCO and its missions. The members of UNESCO Clubs stimulate interest in values and perspectives that integrate the Organization’s ideals in one’s own community, sometimes in remote areas.

At the International level

Clubs for UNESCO encourage the civic awareness that binds people to their historical community and to the specific cultural values of which it is the guardian and brings home to them the need to preserve those values and make their importance, dignity and unique originality clear to all. National civic awareness also means being actively involved in the economic and social problems of one’s time. The Clubs for UNESCO can also help to promote a deep national understanding of the responsibilities devolving on each individual in the development process.
At the international level

UNESCO Clubs help to spread a desire for understanding and cooperation, by organizing face-to-face discussions with other people of all origins and exchanges of information, studies and individuals, as well as through the countless contacts and ties that the modern world makes possible – in short, by exercising a liberal minded influence beyond national frontiers. At the same time, they strive to gain a better knowledge of the problems facing humankind as a whole and to support the organizations working for their solution.

Tips for Success

1. Consider the following:
2. What are your main reasons for starting a Club for UNESCO?
3. Do you have the time and resources to run a Club?
4. Figure out when and where the Club will meet
5. Develop a clear, organized plan and determine which UNESCO priority areas are best suited for the Club
6. Stay informed about UNESCO’s activities
IV. STRUCTURE AND OPERATIONS OF UNESCO CLUBS

1. How to set up a UNESCO Club

Any person wishing to set up a Club should get in touch with the National Commission in the respective country which will give her or him the information needed to carry out the project, since it is for the National Commission to encourage the creation of Clubs and to determine the nature and extent of their activities.

The National Commission is responsible for the orientations and legitimacy of activities that are undertaken by the Clubs, Associations and Centres for UNESCO. In charge of helping to promote international solidarity, these Clubs are usually organized independently within a National Federation. The National Commission must ensure that these Clubs respect the ethics of UNESCO, being particularly vigilant on the use of the name and logo of UNESCO.

The following elements should be submitted to the National Commission for consideration:

- Name of the President
- Name of the Secretary-General
- Contact details: Postal address, telephone, fax, e-mail address
2. The administrative structure of a UNESCO Club

Experience has shown that a well-organized Club with a sound administrative structure offers the best guarantee of continuity and effective action. Great importance should therefore be given to the administrative and management side of work. The formalities of general assemblies, the details of bookkeeping and the drafting of minutes and reports may seem tedious, particularly to young people, and appear to tie up Club activities in needless red tape. However, the Club must follow basic rules: observing such rules and establishing appropriate executive machinery are the best possible training in democracy; no democratic body, however small, can do without them.

There is also a practical reason why officers and some rules are essential: most Clubs must have a budget and to receive and disburse money. This is a field in which the greatest care and certain precautions must be taken. In particular, a Club may have occasion to apply for a grant from a local authority, a government department or the National Commission, when certain formalities will have to be observed as a proof of the Club’s serious intentions.

Legal status of UNESCO Clubs

It is entirely to the advantage of Clubs for UNESCO to acquire, under the laws applying in their country to non-profit-making cultural associations (if these exist), the legal status that will entitle them to official recognition by the public authorities. It is highly desirable that the National Commission should advise them on this matter.

Resources of Clubs

Self-reliance should be the guiding principle of Club management. It should be pointed out that it is quite possible for a Club to be content with activities that cost nothing but voluntary efforts of many members.

Nevertheless, it will usually have to handle some funds, even if they consist only of membership fees or receipts from public functions organized by the Club. It is also quite natural that Club members should wish to arrange educational or cultural trips, and this will inevitably entail some expenditure. Consequently, although they may not wish to go to any great expense, they will have to work out figures, prepare budget estimates and submit financial reports. Besides, it is useful for young people to gain some experience in this way of a treasurer’s functions and to acquire some knowledge at least of the basic financial terms and practices.

3. Relationship between UNESCO and Clubs

In taking UNESCO’s name, the Clubs commit themselves to subscribe to the general principles underlying the Organization’s action. However, although UNESCO allows its name to be used by Clubs recognized by the National Commission for UNESCO or the Federation of Clubs in the country concerned, this does not create any official link between UNESCO and the Clubs, whose activities are the concern of the National Commission, which assumes responsibility in its country for undertakings and activities carried out in UNESCO’s name.

UNESCO Clubs are considered financially and legally autonomous. Although independent, UNESCO, in close collaboration with the National Commissions for UNESCO in the respective Member States, provides ideas and intellectual, financial or material assistance for projects and activities supporting UNESCO’s priorities.

Many Federations and Clubs have regular or occasional contacts with UNESCO, mainly with the Section for UNESCO Clubs and New Partnerships within the Sector for External Relations and Public Information and with the Programme Sectors at UNESCO Headquarters. However, since recently it is UNESCO Regional Offices and UNESCO advisers and attachés in the different parts of the world which are more strategically placed for a more efficient, response to National Commissions and in a better position to help the Clubs develop their activities and to collaborate in their fields of specialization to the organization and the carrying out of meetings as well as in the launching of programmes.

4. Role of National Commissions for UNESCO

It should be noted that the role of the National Commission is not only to foster activities in their respective countries that will contribute to attain the objectives of UNESCO, but also to see that such activities do not depart from the ideals by which they are inspired.

The National Commissions are bodies comprising government representatives, capable of associating with UNESCO’s work the leading national groups concerned with the development of education, science, culture and communication. They provide liaison between each Member State and UNESCO and fulfil advisory, executive and information functions vis-a-vis their own governments and UNESCO. The National Commission or similar body, each Member State is formally required to set up, under Article VII of UNESCO’s Constitution, is a profoundly original feature of UNESCO, the Organization being the only Specialized Agency in the United Nations system that directly associates representatives of the intellectual community of its Member States with its work.

The National Commissions are responsible for ensuring that the Clubs keep to UNESCO’s ideals and that its name is not used to promote activities not in line with the Organization, such as profit-making or seeking personal interest. Clubs respect their statutes concerning the National Commission’s responsibilities towards UNESCO. Clubs are expected to support the National Commission’s work in UNESCO’s programmes in their respective countries.

National Commissions are essential to forge partnerships with the stakeholders of civil society. They play a key role in terms of increasing the visibility of the Organization and to protect its image in discharging their core functions of liaison, coordination and information among different actors and partners of the Organization. They are primarily responsible for the identification of Clubs and the legitimacy of their activities as the Clubs carry the name of UNESCO.

1. Relations with UNESCO’s Associated Schools

Founded in 1953, UNESCO’s Associated Schools Project Network (ASPnet), commonly referred to as UNESCO Associated Schools, is a global network of 10,000 educational institutions in 181 countries (ranging from pre-schools and primary to secondary schools and teacher training institutions), who work in support of quality education.

UNESCO encourages the reinforcement of synergies between the Clubs Movement and the Associated Schools Network as it believes they are complimentary to each other. Such convergence between the Clubs Movement and the Associated Schools is obviously not restrictive. When possible, cooperation, joint action and mutual stimulation strengthen initiatives and help diffuse the UNESCO spirit more widely.

2. Relations with other UNESCO Clubs

Here we would simply mention the many contacts established between Clubs in the same country (when no National Federation exists to facilitate inter-Club exchanges and joint work) and between Clubs in different countries and continents.
3. Use of UNESCO’s name and logo by UNESCO Clubs

General principles and conditions:

On 1 November 2007, the General Conference approved the “Directives concerning the use of the name, acronym, logo and Internet domain names of UNESCO.” According to these Directives, the use of the name and logo of UNESCO is the prerogative of the Organization’s governing bodies, Secretariat, and National Commissions.

These bodies are also the only entities that can authorize others to use the name and logo of UNESCO.

Any use whatsoever by other bodies must be expressly authorized in advance and in writing clearly indicating the:

i. duration;

ii. scope of the authorization;

iii. graphic modalities.

There are two main criteria for granting use of the name and logo in connection with a specific activity:

i. the activity is relevant to the strategic objectives and programme priorities of UNESCO;

ii. the concerned body is compliant to the values, principles and constitutional aims of UNESCO.

Authorizations to use the name and logo of UNESCO are given under the following general conditions:
i. the decision whether or not to authorize is always taken in light of the recommendations of the concerned National Commission(s) for UNESCO;

ii. the body receiving the authorization is requested to assess the impact of the use on UNESCO’s visibility.

There are three main types of authorizations:

i. patronage (moral support) granted to a specific event, activity or publication at the request of another body (patronage cannot be granted to a body itself or to a lasting project programme);

ii. contractual arrangements with another body for a specific activity, event or project (e.g. partnership, cooperation, co-production agreements);

iii. authorization of a national entity to take part in an intergovernmental programme (e.g. World Heritage sites), a programme network (e.g. Associated Schools), or in the movement of Clubs, Centres and Associations for UNESCO.

The official graphic charter of UNESCO defines the UNESCO logo as a block composed of the following three parts:

i. the temple symbol – including the UNESCO acronym;

ii. the complete name (United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization) in one or several languages;

iii. a dotted line in logarithmic progression.

These components cannot be dissociated and this combination is not subject to any interpretation. See the following illustration:
As regards the language(s) in which the complete name of the Organization should be featured, the (local) language(s) of the relevant audience(s) should be chosen. See the UNESCO Logo:

UNESCO Logo Size

The minimum size of the logo is 1.2 cm measured from the top to the bottom of the temple symbol.

The logo block of UNESCO must not be used alone. A short text should always be featured on the right-hand side of the dotted line which specifies the concerned entity and nature of association with UNESCO.

Use of the logo by UNESCO Clubs

Unless another body has been designated by the Member State, the National Commission is the authority in each country that monitors the use of the name and logo of UNESCO at the national level. National Commissions may give, or not give, Clubs for UNESCO the permission to use the Organization’s name, acronym and/or logo of UNESCO, or Internet domain names featuring the name or acronym, subject to the above general conditions. The National Commissions assume the legal and other consequences that arise out of the authorizations that they give.

Whenever a Club for UNESCO uses the logo of UNESCO, it shall ensure that it is never used alone but always together, at the right hand side of the dotted line, with

i. the Club’s own logo (optional);

ii. the Club’s own name;

iii. the below wording that specifies the nature of association with UNESCO.

Wording for Regional Federations of Clubs, Centres and Associations for UNESCO:

"Member of the World Federation of Clubs, Centres and Associations for UNESCO"

OR

"Regional Coordinating Body of Clubs, Centres and Associations for UNESCO"

Wording for National Federations of Clubs, Centres and Associations for UNESCO:
“Member of the World Federation of Clubs, Centres and Associations for UNESCO”

OR

“National Coordinating Body of Clubs, Centres and Associations for UNESCO”

Wording for individual Clubs:

“Member of the Movement of UNESCO Clubs”

Clubs cannot authorize other entities to use the name or logo of UNESCO. Clubs are not authorized to sell for profit any products or services bearing the name, acronym and/or logo of UNESCO.

The commercial use of the name, acronym and/or logo of UNESCO, alone or in combination with other elements, must be approved by the Director-General of UNESCO under a specific agreement.

World Federation of UNESCO Clubs, Centres and Associations (WFUCA) was formed in 1981 as the international coordinating body of the movement of Clubs for UNESCO world-wide. WFUCA is a NGO that has official relations with UNESCO.

Its role is to provide general co-ordination services, organize meetings and exchanges, and contribute to training programmes, projects and publications. It’s interregional and sub-regional programmes stimulate active co-operation among national federations. A World Congress of WFUCA is held every four years to evaluate, coordinate and integrate the Federation’s programmes.

National and Regional Federations of UNESCO Clubs

National and Regional Federations of UNESCO Clubs are the coordinating bodies of the UNESCO movement within their respective countries or regions. They come under the responsibility of the relevant National Commissions for UNESCO and should always inform and consult the National Commissions in carrying out their activities.

V. ANNEX

i. Glossary (in alphabetical order)

Constitution of UNESCO
The Constitution of UNESCO, signed on 16 November 1945, came into force on 4 November 1946 after ratification by twenty countries: Australia, Brazil, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, France, Greece, India, Lebanon, Mexico, New Zealand, Norway, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, Turkey, United Kingdom and the United States of America.

Director-General of UNESCO
The executive head of the Organization. He or she is elected every four years by the General Conference.

ERI (External Relations and Information)
The Sector for External Relations and Information (ERI) plays a central role in developing relations with Member States, Associate Members, observers and territories, and coordinates its activities with the United Nations, its specialized agencies, programmes and organs, and with other international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations. In addition, the Sector is in charge of partnerships with the private sector as well as with bilateral and multilateral donors and partners.

The Executive Board
Composed of 58 Member States, is responsible for ensuring the execution of the programme adopted by the General Conference. It meets twice a year to examine the Organization’s programme and budget.

The General Conference
Primary decision-making body, comprising representatives of all Member States. It meets every two years to determine the policies and main lines of work of the Organization. The General Conference determines the policies and the main lines of work of the Organization. Its duty is to set the programmes and the budget of UNESCO. It also elects the Members of the Executive Board and appoints, every four years, the Director-General. The working languages of the General Conference are Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish.

Member States and Associate Members
Countries that have signed the Constitution of UNESCO are Member States to UNESCO. There are currently 195 Members States (2014).

Territories or groups of territories which are not responsible for the conduct of their international relations that have signed the Constitution of UNESCO are called Associate Members of UNESCO. There are 8 Associate Members (2014).

National Commissions for UNESCO
The National Commissions for UNESCO are national cooperating bodies set up by the Member States for the purpose of associating their governmental and non-governmental bodies with the work of the Organization.

Participation Programme
The Participation Programme functions as one of the complements to UNESCO’s regular activities by analyzing, evaluating and facilitating the implementation of national, sub-regional, inter-regional and regional projects directly related to the activities of the Organization.

Permanent Delegations to UNESCO
The Permanent Delegations to UNESCO, established by Member States, ensure liaison between Member States’ Governments and the Organization’s Secretariat. The Permanent Delegations are headed by a person having diplomatic status (generally with the rank of ambassador). When a Permanent Delegate is appointed to the Organization, the appointment is the subject of an official communication addressed to the Director-General of the Organization.

Secretariat
The Secretariat consists of the Director-General and staff. There are 5 Programme Sectors: Education, Natural Sciences, Social & Human Sciences, Culture and Communication. UNESCO also has several Institutes and over 50 field units across the world.
Constitution of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization

Adopted in London on 16 November 1945 and amended by the General Conference at its 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 12th, 15th, 17th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th and 31st sessions.

The Governments of the States Parties to this Constitution on behalf of their peoples declare:

That since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed;

That ignorance of each other’s ways and lives has been a common cause, throughout the history of mankind, of that suspicion and mistrust between the peoples of the world through which their differences have all too often broken into war;

That the great and terrible war which has now ended was a war made possible by the denial of the democratic principles of the dignity, equality and mutual respect of men, and by the propagation, in their place, through ignorance and prejudice, of the doctrine of the inequality of men and races;

That the wide diffusion of culture, and the education of humanity for justice and liberty and peace are indispensable to the dignity of man and constitute a sacred duty which all the nations must fulfill in a spirit of mutual assistance and concern;

That a peace based exclusively upon the political and economic arrangements of governments would not be a peace which could secure the unanimous, lasting and sincere support of the peoples of the world, and that the peace must therefore be founded, if it is not to fail, upon the intellectual and moral solidarity of mankind.

For these reasons, the States Parties to this Constitution, believing in full and equal opportunities for education for all, in the unrestricted pursuit of objective truth, and in the free exchange of ideas and knowledge, are agreed and determined to develop and to increase the means of communication between their peoples and to employ these means for the purposes of mutual understanding and a truer and more perfect knowledge of each other’s lives;

In consequence whereof they do hereby create the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for the purpose of advancing, through the educational and scientific and cultural relations of the peoples of the world, the objectives of international peace and of the common welfare of mankind for which the United Nations Organization was established and which its Charter proclaims.

Article I

Purposes and functions

1. The purpose of the Organization is to contribute to peace and security by promoting collaboration among the nations through education, science and culture in order to further universal respect for justice, for the rule of law and for the human rights and fundamental freedoms which are affirmed for the peoples of the world, without distinction of race, sex, language or religion, by the Charter of the United Nations.

2. To realize this purpose the Organization will:

   a. Collaborate in the work of advancing the mutual knowledge and understanding of peoples, through all means of mass communication and to that end recommend such international agreements as may be necessary to promote the free flow of ideas by word and image;

   b. Give fresh impulse to popular education and to the spread of culture: By collaborating with Members, at their request, in the development of educational activities; By instituting collaboration among the nations to advance the ideal of equality of educational opportunity without regard to race, sex or any distinctions, economic or social; By suggesting educational methods best suited to prepare the children of the world for the responsibilities of freedom;

   c. Maintain, increase and diffuse knowledge: By assuring the conservation and protection of the world’s inheritance of books, works of art and monuments of history and science, and recommending to the nations concerned the necessary international conventions;
By encouraging cooperation among the nations in all branches of intellectual activity, including the international exchange of persons active in the fields of education, science and culture and the exchange of publications, objects of artistic and scientific interest and other materials of information; By initiating methods of international cooperation calculated to give the people of all countries access to the printed and published materials produced by any of them.

4. With a view to preserving the independence, integrity and fruitful diversity of the cultures and educational systems of the States Members of the Organization, the Organization is prohibited from intervening in matters which are essentially within their domestic jurisdiction.
