

Media Coverage
Release of the Education for All (EFA)
Global Monitoring Report (GMR) 2013/14
January 29 2014

1. The 2013/4 GMR received more online media coverage than any of its predecessors. In just three days, the coverage of the GMR 2013/4 was more than double the coverage the GMR 2012 had received in a full month. News articles online and in print reached almost 31 million people in almost 100 countries with an Advertising Value Equivalent (AVE) of almost USD$9 million.
2. News about the EFA GMR reached almost 20 more countries in one month than ever done before, indicating that the report is reaching new audiences. The highest number of articles were published in the USA, followed by Brazil and then China.

Global Monitoring Report - Online Medias

(Data above represents the period 26 January – 4 February, 2014)

3. A global press release was prepared, along with press releases for sub-Saharan Africa, South and West Asia and Latin America. These were disseminated by the GMR communications team and via UNESCO's Department for Public Information (DPI).
4. All major news agencies covered the GMR, including the Associated Press, Agencia EFE, Reuters, Al Jazeera, Inter Press Service, All Africa, Xinhua, Deutsche Welle, Agence France Press, the Press Association and SAPA.
5. Opinion pieces were sourced in the names of the Director General of UNESCO, the Chair of the Youth Advocacy Group (YAG), the head of Education at OECD, the Prime Minister of Ethiopia, the Director of the EFA GMR and printed in the South China Morning Post, Huffington Post (USA, UK, France and Spain), FT This is Africa Online, The East African, the Mail and Guardian, Semanario, El Universal, ABC Color, Al Ahram, Sunday Independent (SA) and La Croix.
6. Many news outlets published multiple stories on the Report, looking at the global and local situations. Such was the case in Brazil for example, where there was blanket coverage of the country's ranking in literacy tables, but also headlines on the huge cost of poor quality education. In addition, coverage this year showed that it was not just the most important newspapers who covered the story, but also many small and often community media as well. As an example, in Chile La Tercera y El Mercurio published related news, but also a citizen newspaper, El Repuertero.

- Coverage helped target key policy makers and support the advocacy objectives of the Report. On 29th January, for instance, the headline from the EFA GMR 2013/4 hit the front pages in Ethiopia as African heads of state arrived in Ethiopia's capital.

- Coverage was also achieved in broadcast media, reaching many more millions than our media monitoring service is set up to track. The coverage included feature-length packages on BBC World, BBC Newsround, BBC Singapore, Reuters TV, Aljazeera, TV Globo, TV Publica, and talkshows in English and Spanish on Deutsche Welle. Interviews on the Report ran across the BBC (Newshour, Africa, World Service, Arabic, Hausa), on VOA, SBS Australia, Deutschlandfunk, Logo, RFI, TV Brasil, South South News, UN Radio, Arise TV, NPR, Feature News Reports, Dawn News, Express news, Geo News, Radio Pakistan, Waqt News, Express news, PTV News, PTV news, Rede TV, SBT, Rede Vida, I24 news and Radio Maroc. News bulletins were played on BBC Delhi, and BBC Radio 4 Today Programme. Standout interviews include the Director General on CNN's primetime breakfast news show, and BBC News 10.30pm. The Director of the Report, Pauline Rose, appeared live via skype on CNN's top-rated 'Quest means Business'.
- In addition to the print and online articles on the 2013/4 GMR, almost 2000 facebook posts and blogs covered the news over the first three months of the year.
