Sixty-seventh session

Item 130 of the provisional agenda*

Programme budget for the biennium 2012-2013

United Nations Office for Partnerships

Report of the Secretary-General

Summary

The present report is submitted pursuant to General Assembly decisions 52/466 and 53/475, wherein the Secretary-General was requested to inform the Assembly, on a regular basis, about the activities of the United Nations Office for Partnerships. It supplements the information contained in the previous reports of the Secretary-General (A/53/700 and Add.1, A/54/664 and Add.1-3, A/55/763 and Corr.1, A/57/133, A/58/173, A/59/170, A/60/327, A/61/189, A/62/220, A/63/257, A/64/91, A/65/347 and A/66/188).

The United Nations Office for Partnerships serves as a gateway for public-private partnerships with the United Nations system in furtherance of the Millennium Development Goals. The Office oversees the following areas:

(a) United Nations Fund for International Partnerships (UNFIP). UNFIP was established in 1998 to serve as the interface between the United Nations system and the United Nations Foundation — the public charity responsible for administering Robert E. Turner's $1 billion contribution in support of United Nations causes. At the end of 2011, the cumulative allocations provided by the United Nations Foundation through UNFIP to projects implemented by the United Nations system reached approximately $1.19 billion. Of this amount, $0.4 billion (37 per cent) represents core Turner funds, and $0.7 billion (63 per cent) was generated from other co-financing partners. The total number of United Nations projects and programmes supported through the end of 2011 by the United Nations Foundation through UNFIP stands at 524. Collectively, these projects have been implemented by 43 United Nations entities in 124 countries;

* A/67/150.

(b) United Nations Democracy Fund. The Fund was established by the Secretary-General in July 2005 to support democratization around the world. It focuses on strengthening the voice of civil society, promoting human rights and ensuring the participation of all groups in democratic processes. Through the Fund, the Office has channelled approximately $110 million to more than 400 projects in 150 countries around the world. These range from strengthening civil society leadership skills and promoting the participation of women and youth, to media programmes allowing civil society to project its voice;

(c) Partnership advisory services and outreach. These services were initiated in 2006 in response to the growing demand from the United Nations system, Governments and non-State actors on how best to develop and implement public-private partnerships. The Office provides advice to entities, including academic institutions, companies, foundations, government agencies, media groups and civil society organizations. Investment in high-impact initiatives is encouraged by providing advice to potential partners regarding procedures and best practices; assisting in the design of programmes and projects; helping to establish and manage global and regional networks; and promoting the Millennium Development Goals as a framework for action.

I. United Nations Fund for International Partnerships

1. The United Nations Fund for International Partnerships (UNFIP) was established in 1998 to serve as the interface between the United Nations Foundation and the United Nations system. In recent years, the United Nations Foundation has evolved from primarily a project-based grant-making organization to one that builds campaigns and serves as an advocate for the United Nations and a platform for connecting people, ideas and resources to help the United Nations solve global problems. In this way, the Foundation seeks to assist the United Nations in taking its best work and ideas to scale through partnerships, advocacy, constituency-building and fundraising.

2. Grant-making continues to be an important aspect of the work of the United Nations Foundation. However, it has evolved from pure grant-making (using the original $1 billion endowment from Robert E. (Ted) Turner) to also receiving grants and third-party co-financing. At the end of 2011, the cumulative allocations to UNFIP projects reached approximately $1.19 billion, of which $0.4 billion came from core Turner funds, and $0.7 billion was generated from other partners. The main co-financing partners include, inter alia, The Gavi Fund, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention of the United States of America, the American Red Cross, the Department of International Development of the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, The Rotary Foundation of Rotary International, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Norway and The Vodafone Foundation. A total of 524 projects have been implemented by 43 United Nations entities in 124 countries. The distribution of projects by implementing partners and themes is provided in annex I to the present document; a description of a selection of the projects is provided below.

3. The relationship agreement between the United Nations and the United Nations Foundation, originally established in 1998 and subsequently renewed in 2007, is being reviewed to ensure that it reflects the change in the relationship and the strengthening of the consultative arrangements between the two bodies. The UNFIP Advisory Board has been apprised of the situation and the guidance of the Office of Legal Affairs is awaited.

A. Global health with emphasis on children's health

4. Since its inception, the United Nations Foundation, together with UNFIP, has worked hand-in-hand with the World Health Organization (WHO), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), other United Nations bodies and Ministries of Health of developing countries to develop and expand major initiatives to help children to survive and thrive. Over time, United Nations Foundation investments in children's health have proved to be one of the most promising avenues for attracting a wide variety of partner support for these initiatives. The successful campaigns on polio, measles and malaria have helped to channel hundreds of millions of additional dollars in support of United Nations global health efforts.

5. In 2011, the United Nations Foundation and UNFIP strengthened their global health portfolio, most significantly by adding a substantial advocacy dimension to their work.

Polio

6. The United Nations Foundation continues its role as an active member of the Global Polio Eradication Initiative, a WHO- and UNICEF-supported effort targeting the global cessation of wild poliovirus transmission. Strong progress has been made, with the number of polio cases worldwide having been reduced by 52 per cent in 2011 compared with 2010, and the historic milestone of India being polio-free since January 2011. The United Nations Foundation and Initiative partners remained actively engaged in ensuring the full implementation of the polio eradication strategies in the remaining three polio-endemic countries, namely, Afghanistan, Nigeria and Pakistan.

7. The Foundation's leadership within the Polio Advocacy Group of the Initiative has been essential in securing new donors for the global effort and political commitments from polio-endemic countries. In 2012, it will accelerate its efforts to help to mobilize the critical financing required for implementing the 2012-2013 emergency action plan by supporting the resource mobilization office at WHO and soliciting new and renewed contributions from donor countries for the Initiative.

Measles

8. The Measles Initiative, which recently noted its one billionth vaccination, marked its tenth anniversary in 2011. Since 2001, the Initiative has supported vaccinations in over 70 countries, decreasing mortality and raising routine coverage of measles from 72 per cent to 85 per cent, at a cost of just over $1 billion. Five of the six regions designated by WHO have set elimination targets of 2020 or earlier. The sixth, which includes Bangladesh, India and Indonesia is expected to set its target date during 2012.

9. In collaboration with the American Red Cross, the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, the United Nations Foundation mobilized $43.2 million in 2011 for WHO and UNICEF in support of measles vaccination campaigns in multiple countries.

10. The Measles Initiative has expanded its work to include advocacy, communications and resource mobilization, the latter of which will emphasize the financial responsibility of Governments to increase their share of funding for immunization campaigns. Looking ahead, Measles Initiative campaigns are scheduled to be conducted in 27 countries in 2012, targeting over 186 million children.

Malaria

11. According to a report released in September 2011 by the Roll Back Malaria Partnership, global malaria deaths dropped by about 38 per cent in the past decade, and the lives of more than 1 million people were saved. Through the Nothing But Nets campaign and other malaria partnerships, including with the Secretary-General's Special Envoy for Malaria, WHO and the Roll Back Malaria Partnership, the United Nations Foundation will continue to contribute to the Organization's goal of ending malaria deaths by 2015.

12. In 2011, the Nothing But Nets campaign continued funding the purchase and distribution of long-lasting insecticide-treated nets to protect the most vulnerable populations in Africa. During the spring, the United Nations Foundation and UNFIP worked with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) to provide 35,000 bednets to refugees in Liberia, and in August, they worked with UNICEF to provide 225,000 bednets as part of a universal coverage bednet distribution in Cameroon. In July, the Foundation collaborated with UNHCR in an emergency appeal to provide 60,000 long-lasting insecticide-treated nets to refugees in the Horn of Africa. Throughout the year, the Nothing But Nets campaign team travelled to cities in the United States to build awareness, raise money and advocate for continued Government support of essential programmes.

13. In 2012, Nothing But Nets will focus on three primary objectives: fundraising, awareness-building and advocacy. The 2012 campaign operations will be supported through $1 million from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and increased funding from ExxonMobil.

Every Woman Every Child initiative

14. In 2011, the United Nations Foundation supported the effort to continue the Every Woman Every Child initiative, which was launched in 2010 to implement the Global Strategy for Women's and Children's Health spearheaded by the Secretary-General with the aim of saving the lives of 16 million women and children. The Foundation has been working with the Secretary-General's office and other partners on advocacy, communications and outreach to the private sector to support the effort, which has catalysed 200 monetary and non-monetary commitments.

15. In 2012, the United Nations Foundation will continue to work with the Secretary-General's office and all partners, including the Partnership for Maternal, Newborn and Child Health at WHO, to identify appropriate advocacy, partnership-building and communications campaigns to drive the Every Woman Every Child initiative forward.

B. Women and population

16. The United Nations has a vast mandate in respect of gender equality and women's empowerment, at the heart of which is a web of international agreements and principles, including the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the Millennium Development Goals, that commit the entire global community to addressing the rights and needs of women and girls.

17. Through its programme on women and population, the United Nations Foundation works with the United Nations and other partners to promote gender equality and empower women and girls, with a particular focus on reproductive and sexual health and rights.

Strategy for adolescent girls

18. Since its inception, the United Nations Foundation has invested more than $46 million in programmes through UNFIP to address the rights and needs of adolescent girls, working with several United Nations entities, including the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), UNICEF, UNHCR, WHO and the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women). This investment has helped to achieve significant programme and policy results, strengthen United Nations capacity and commitment, and increase support and investment.

19. In 2011, the United Nations Foundation's priorities included: (a) investing in developing, evaluating and sustaining programme models; (b) advocating for changes in public policy; and (c) leveraging partnerships to build constituencies and mobilize resources for adolescent girls.

United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on Adolescent Girls

20. The United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on Adolescent Girls, which is co-chaired by UNFPA and UNICEF and includes the International Labour Organization (ILO), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), UN-Women, WHO and UNHCR, works to support the United Nations and its partners in advancing policies and programmes for adolescent girls.

21. In 2011, the Task Force developed technical programme guidance materials on how to reach the most marginalized adolescent girls. It provided technical support to countries that are rolling out programmes and advocacy campaigns, and hosted events that increase the visibility of girls in the global agenda. It also increased the coordination of signatory agencies. With co-financing from the Packard Foundation, the United Nations Foundation's support enabled the Task Force to integrate a focus on adolescent girls into the work of the United Nations. The Foundation also provided funding support for the Global Coordinator of the Task Force.

22. In 2012, with funds from the Packard Foundation, the United Nations Foundation aims to continue to support the Global Coordinator and aid the Task Force in developing and implementing a strategy that moves towards long-term sustainability.

Girl Up campaign

23. In September 2010, the United Nations Foundation launched Girl Up, a campaign that gives teenage girls in the United States the opportunity to learn about adolescent girls around the world. It provides them the tools, information and resources they need to put their own ideas into motion. Over the past years, the Girl Up campaign has provided online and offline opportunities for teenage girls and campaign partners to take action and deepen their understanding of United Nations programmes that focus on adolescent girls. It has built a network of 200,000 constituents in the United States.

24. In 2011, the Girl Up campaign pursued strategies for grass-roots engagement by introducing online initiatives that provide opportunities for action on particular issue areas, such as raising awareness of child marriage and girls' education.

25. Funding raised from the Girl Up campaign supports United Nations programmes in Ethiopia, Guatemala, Liberia and Malawi to ensure that adolescent girls receive equal access to education, health and economic opportunities, and are able to live a life free from violence. For example, the United Nations is working with Government and civil society partners to launch a new programme in Liberia targeting girls between the ages of 10 and 14 who were not previously being reached through United Nations and Government programming. This programme promotes the rights of girls in the areas of education, health, violence prevention and economic opportunities. In 2012, the United Nations Foundation aims to expand its investments in empowerment projects for adolescent girls in these countries.

Coalition for Adolescent Girls

26. This public-private partnership, founded in 2005, aims to elevate adolescent girls' issues on the global agenda. The Coalition for Adolescent Girls was revitalized in 2011 after a diagnostic assessment of its members and the adolescent girl community. As a result, it currently comprises over 30 international organizations, as well as the United Nations entities involved in the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on Adolescent Girls. It has instituted quarterly in-person meetings, working groups and topical consultations that allow organizations to collaborate, share information, tools and resources, and build technical capacity. In 2011, the United Nations Foundation launched a new report in the Girls Count series — the first comprehensive research focused exclusively on adolescent girls in the developing world — entitled Girls Grow: A Vital Force in Rural Economies, written by Catherine Bertini and the Chicago Council on Global Affairs.

Support to the United Nations Population Fund

27. In 2011, the United Nations Foundation built on its long history of partnership with UNFPA by supporting the transition of the agency's new Executive Director, Babatunde Osotimehin, and increasing his visibility among key audiences. Specifically, the Foundation provided a $1 million project grant in March to support the advocacy and fundraising activities of UNFPA liaison offices in Brussels, Copenhagen and Tokyo and its headquarters in New York. It also helped to secure funding from the Ford Foundation to aid Mr. Osotimehin's efforts to reinvigorate UNFPA's communications strategy and participated in the agency's ongoing strategic planning process.

Support to the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women

28. The United Nations Foundation worked with UN-Women primarily in its first year as a United Nations entity and provided input into the 100-day strategic plan of its Executive Director, Michelle Bachelet. The Foundation provided external communications, media and executive team support around the official launch and transition, including Ms. Bachelet's trip to Liberia for the 100th anniversary of International Women's Day.

C. Energy and climate change

29. Sustainable development, as Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon has noted, depends on access to sustainable energy. In providing sustainable energy for all, we can strengthen economic growth, expand equity and opportunity, and protect the environment for long-term prosperity. That is why the Secretary-General launched his Sustainable Energy for All initiative. This multi-stakeholder partnership brings all key stakeholders, namely, Governments, the private sector and civil society, to the table to mobilize action around three ambitious but achievable objectives for 2030: (a) to ensure universal access to modern energy services; (b) to double the global rate of improvement in energy efficiency; and (c) to double the share of renewable energy in the global energy mix.

Sustainable Energy for All

30. In September 2011, the Secretary-General launched a new High-level Group on Sustainable Energy for All to develop a concrete action agenda for the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development (Rio+20). The group has launched its action agenda and mobilized significant commitments from Governments, the private sector and civil society to meet the Secretary-General's three objectives. Thus far, over 50 developing countries have joined the initiative and commenced activities. Businesses, investors, Governments, multilateral development banks and international and civil society organizations also have announced significant financial commitments to advance the three objectives of Sustainable Energy for All.

31. The United Nations Foundation plays an instrumental role in supporting the initiative by (a) working with and under the guidance of the Executive Office of the Secretary-General to structure, build and carry out the initiative; (b) acting as a fiduciary for the initiative, with responsibility for raising, disbursing, monitoring and reporting on funds; (c) leading an ambitious communications and outreach effort to raise awareness about the initiative, working closely with the public relations firm Weber Shandwick; and (d) leading and coordinating outreach to civil society, with a focus on disseminating information about the initiative and developing commitments in support of the three 2030 objectives.

32. In 2011, the United Nations Foundation collaborated with the Permanent Mission of Denmark to the United Nations in New York to form Friends of Sustainable Energy for All, an informal group of more than 20 Permanent Representatives to the United Nations. The Foundation assisted with planning and logistical support for several meetings of the group, bringing in United Nations officials and other high-level speakers to educate members about the issue, encourage commitments and prepare for the negotiation of the Rio+20 outcome document.

II. United Nations Democracy Fund

33. The United Nations Democracy Fund was established by the Secretary-General at the 2005 World Summit as a United Nations General Trust Fund and launched in April 2006, with the United Nations Office for Partnerships and UNFIP providing administrative support and sharing resources. Since then, the grant-making body has become clearly defined as a fund for civil society organizations. It is the only United Nations entity that has the word "democracy" in its name, the only United Nations entity with the primary purpose of supporting democracy by empowering civil society, and one of the youngest entities in the United Nations system.

34. The large majority of the Fund's project financing goes to local civil society organizations in countries in both the transition and consolidation phases of democratization. By supporting the "demand" rather than "supply" side of democratization, the Fund plays a new, distinct and unique role in complementing and enhancing the other work of the United Nations — for example, the work with Governments carried out by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) — to strengthen democratic governance around the world.

35. In the few years since its creation, the Fund has experienced considerable growth in its portfolio, donor base, impact and visibility. Its projects are aimed at strengthening the voice of civil society, promoting human rights and encouraging the participation of all groups in democratic processes. It also supports a number of major global and regional projects with a normative and policy focus. In its first five rounds of funding, the Fund supported some 400 projects in over 150 countries, with a total disbursement of more than $110 million. They ranged from supporting civil society efforts to promote accountability by Governments and transparency to building capacity for strengthening good governance and the rule of law.

A. Fifth round of projects

36. In 2011, the Fund began funding its fifth round of projects. The round opened for proposals in November 2010, through an online application system that facilitates access by civil society organizations. A total of 3,754 applications from organizations in 149 countries were received, reflecting continuing strong global demand for the Fund's services. The vast majority of proposals were submitted by local civil society organizations.

37. The first stage of project selection was based on scoring by independent experts against set criteria. High-scoring proposals were then subject to rigorous quality control and due diligence, including by United Nations resident coordinators and, where applicable, Special Representatives of the Secretary-General, as well as all entities of the Fund's Programme Consultative Group. On the basis of this review, the Fund's Advisory Board recommended a short list of projects, and the Fund advised the Permanent Missions of Member States in which listed projects were to take place. The short list was then submitted to the Secretary-General for approval. Shortlisted applicants were asked to submit draft project documents by midyear, which were then negotiated with the Fund. The first tranches of project funding were disbursed by September. This timeline compares favourably with international standards.

38. In the fifth round, 65 projects were funded, at a total cost of $14,000,000. As defined by their key activities, the projects broke down as follows:

- (a) Community development (33 per cent);
- (b) Women's empowerment (26 per cent);
- (c) Youth (15 per cent);
- d) Media (9 per cent);
- (e) Strengthening instrumentalities of government (8 per cent);
- (f) Rule of law and human rights (6 per cent);
- (g) Tools for democratization (3 per cent).

39. Throughout 2011, the Fund collected the required reports on projects funded under the second through fourth rounds, conducted the closing of completed projects from the first and second rounds and reported on its achievements to the Advisory Board.

B. Donor base

40. The Fund undertook a number of initiatives to strengthen its donor base, which continued to grow despite the continuing impact of the global financial crisis. A series of outreach activities were conducted by existing major donors to encourage others. Argentina contributed to the Fund for the first time, expanding the group of donors to 40 Member States. The cumulative total amount of contributions received between 2005 and 2011 exceeded $125 million.

C. Evaluation

41. The United Nations Democracy Fund and its Advisory Board are committed to having external evaluators conduct independent assessments of its projects in order to improve project selection and management and as a basis for a strong learning process. A firm of internationally renowned evaluators, Transtec, contracted by the Fund in 2010, completed the first 25 post-project evaluations of projects from the second and third rounds. The vast majority of the evaluations were positive, and provided valuable lessons learned for the Fund's knowledge management. Based in Brussels with a regional office in Beirut, Transtec has broad experience in evaluations, audits and studies in a range of fields, including institution-building, democracy and governance, community development and post-conflict rehabilitation. The Fund published all post-project evaluations on its website, following a decision by the Advisory Board at its November 2011 meeting to make them public. In this way, the Fund consolidated its position as one of the most transparent entities in the United Nations family.

D. Governance

42. The two governing mechanisms of the Fund, the Advisory Board and the Programme Consultative Group, continued to play an active and guiding role in 2011. Advisory Board members appointed by the Secretary-General continued to serve a two-year term through December 2011. This included the seven largest contributors to the Fund, namely, Australia, Germany, India, Japan, Qatar, Spain and the United States; six countries reflecting geographical diversity and commitment to democratic principles, namely, Costa Rica, Ghana, Iraq, Mauritius, Poland and the Republic of Korea; and three members serving in an individual capacity, Professor Michael Doyle of Columbia University, who served as Chair of the Board; Professor Kwame Anthony Appiah of Princeton University; and Professor Seyla Benhabib of Yale University. The two civil society organizations on the Board were the International Peace Institute and Conectas Human Rights of Brazil.

43. In addition to recommending funding proposals for the Secretary-General's approval, the Advisory Board provided him with policy guidance on the development of programme frameworks and funding guidelines. The Programme Consultative Group provided input and quality control in the project selection process and implementation phase, making use of the specific expertise of each of its entities: the Department of Political Affairs, the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the Peacebuilding Support Office, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and UN-Women.

E. Sixth round of projects

44. The United Nations Democracy Fund launched its sixth round of project proposals in November 2010. When applications closed on 31 December 2011, the Fund had received 2,868 project proposals from organizations in 141 countries — the second highest number in its history. The vast majority of applications came from local or regional civil society organizations in Africa, Asia, the Americas, the Arab region and Eastern Europe. As in 2010, a notable share of project proposals focused on youth (a total of 361), highlighting the Fund's role in supporting efforts for change with a sustainable impact for the future. A sizeable proportion of proposals (336 in total) focused on the rule of law and human rights.

45. In accordance with the Fund's annual timetable, sixth round applications were to be assessed by March 2012 and the Advisory Board was to recommend a shortlist in April, after which the Fund was to advise the Permanent Missions of Member States in which listed projects were to take place. The shortlist was then to be submitted to the Secretary-General for approval. Shortlisted applicants were to be asked to submit draft project documents by midyear, to be negotiated with the Fund, and the first tranches of project funding were to be disbursed by September, again in a timeline comparing favourably with international standards.

46. On the International Day of Democracy, the Fund hosted a film screening for Board members, United Nations staff and members of the public featuring documentaries showcasing Fund projects. UNTV completed four Fund films in 2011 on projects in Azerbaijan, Gabon, Guatemala and Indonesia.

F. Democracy in action

Democracy in action I: Partners for integrity in public administration in Egypt

47. In Egypt, an initiative financed by the Fund works to support integrity in the administrative apparatus of the Ministries of the Interior, Housing, Health, Social Solidarity, Education and Justice. Employees are trained in the United Nations Convention against Corruption; workshops and round tables are held with journalists and lawyers; and an annual report on principles and the status of transparency in Egypt is produced. Other aspects of the initiative include a hotline for complaints of corruption and the provision of legal advice to women, shantytown dwellers, street children and persons with special needs. The initiative is being implemented by the Arab Program for Human Rights Activists.

Democracy in action II: Collaboration between magistrates and civil society organizations for a democratic future in Guinea

48. In Guinea, the Fund finances a project to develop the integrity and capacity of the Guinean judicial system. Through training and workshops tailored to the needs of the beneficiaries, the project will enhance the capacity of magistrates and civil society organizations to understand better how the judiciary should function, identify necessary key reforms and effectively advocate for change. It is aimed at enabling civil society to better participate in reforming democratic institutions and supporting the emergence of an independent judiciary able to deliver justice in line with international standards. The initiative is being implemented by the BEFORE project.

Democracy in action III: Participation of rural women at the village level in China

49. In China, an initiative financed by the Fund works to strengthen the role of marginalized rural women in village-level governance and raise their awareness of democratic participation. It mobilizes rural women to participate in local elections, governance and the monitoring of public affairs at the village level, and aims to improve village women cadres' leadership and decision-making skills in public governance. It is being implemented by Women's Watch-China.

Democracy in action IV: Creating a women's parliament in Azerbaijan

50. In Azerbaijan, the Fund finances a project to create the first women's parliament as a tool to give real meaning to women's rights and to improve governance in the country as a whole. It draws on the expertise of active women from all sectors to promote greater transparency and accountability, while training them in public policy and the reporting mechanisms of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. The project is being implemented by the Azerbaijani non-governmental organization Women's Association for Rational Development.

Democracy in action V: Supporting the participation of northern indigenous peoples in the Russian Federation

51. In the Russian Federation, an initiative financed by the Fund works to develop and support the democratic participation of northern indigenous peoples. With vast natural resources, northern regions of the Russian Federation are of national and global importance. They are also home to large numbers of indigenous peoples striving to maintain their livelihoods and traditional way of life. The initiative, implemented by the Centre for the Support of Indigenous Peoples of the North, is aimed at creating more effective legal relationships between indigenous peoples and business and Government through the elaboration of draft legislation, a code of conduct and a manual, and at informing indigenous peoples of their civic rights and guiding them through the process of democratic decision-making.

Democracy in action VI: Training legal professionals in Latin America to litigate before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights

52. In Latin America, the Fund is financing a project to train legal professionals to litigate before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights. Implemented by the Human Rights Centre of the Law School at the University of Chile, the project offers training seminars, procedural manuals and ongoing advisory support. It has published a manual of the Inter-American system's new rules of procedure and conducted a study assessing more than 500 cases pertaining to the legal representation of victims of human rights violations. The study included an evaluation of access to justice within the system, levels of transparency and access to information.

III. Partnership advisory services and outreach

53. Throughout its history, the United Nations system has worked with the private sector and civil society. Member States have recognized the importance of, and expressed strong support for, the active engagement of non-State actors in promoting the development agenda of the United Nations system such as in the following: the 2000 United Nations Millennium Declaration, the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development, the eleventh session of the Commission on Sustainable Development (2003), the 2005 World Summit, the 2010 MDG Summit, the 2011 General Assembly resolution entitled “Towards global partnerships” (resolution 66/223) and, most recently, the outcome document of the Rio+20 Conference (resolution 66/288, annex).

54. The United Nations Office for Partnerships works in collaboration with the United Nations Foundation to further promote and implement partnership advisory services and outreach initiatives, and fosters innovative strategies for engaging non-State actors with the United Nations system. The Office leverages its expertise and capacity to engage global corporations, foundations and leading philanthropists in United Nations causes while supporting the United Nations system in its advocacy and outreach efforts through partnership-building.

55. Responding to an increasing interest from the private sector and civil society, the Office provides partnership advisory services in respect of enhancing the capacity of networks and alliances, sharing resources and expertise, advocacy and outreach campaigns, and raising awareness of United Nations objectives, including the Millennium Development Goals.

56. In 2011, a wide spectrum of companies, foundations and non-governmental organizations approached the Office to offer assistance and seek advice on how to join the United Nations in finding sustainable solutions to some of the world’s most challenging problems. The majority of non-State actors offered assistance in programmes focused on poverty reduction, gender equality, the empowerment of women and girls, education and health in the global South.

Selection of key projects and initiatives

57. The following list of key partnership initiatives is divided into three categories: Member States; United Nations system and other international organizations; and the private sector and civil society.

1. Member States

Permanent Memorial at the United Nations to the Victims of Slavery and the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade

58. The United Nations Office for Partnerships continued to assist the Permanent Memorial Committee in implementing a comprehensive media, outreach and resource mobilization strategy aimed at erecting a permanent memorial monument at the United Nations Headquarters complex. The Permanent Memorial Committee includes nine Member States, the African Union, the Caribbean Community (CARICOM), UNESCO, the Department of Public Information and other organizations. It is chaired by the Permanent Representative of Jamaica to the United Nations. The Office administers the Trust Fund in terms of receipts, allocations and disbursements of resources. As at 16 January 2012, contributions totalled $1,052,271, the bulk of which was received from Member States.

2. United Nations system and other international organizations

Special events of the Economic and Social Council

59. Since 2002, the Department of Economic and Social Affairs has teamed up with the United Nations Office for Partnerships in organizing annual special events of the Economic and Social Council to highlight International Corporate Philanthropy Day. The 2011 event entitled “Partnering with the philanthropic community to promote Education for All” was organized in collaboration with UNICEF, UNESCO and the Committee Encouraging Corporate Philanthropy. The special event, chaired by the President of the Council, Lazarous Kapambwe (Zambia), promoted a number of United Nations education-related initiatives and expanded multi-stakeholder engagement in reaching the international goals and targets relating to education.

60. The 2012 special event was entitled “Breaking new ground: partnerships for more and better jobs for young people”. The group of hosts included the Department of Economic and Social Affairs, ILO, the United Nations Office for Partnerships and the Global Compact. The event was chaired by the President of the Council, Miloš Koterec (Slovakia).

3. The private sector and civil society

2011 Forum “Investing in women and entrepreneurship: solutions to addressing MDG 3”

61. Since 2009, the United Nations Office for Partnerships and the Business Civic Leadership Center of the United States Chamber of Commerce have hosted annual forums at Headquarters with a focus on the role of the private sector in achieving the Millennium Development Goals. Coinciding with International Women’s Day (8 March), the high-level Forum “Investing in women and entrepreneurship: solutions to addressing MDG 3” provided an interactive platform for United Nations senior officials and business leaders to share and announce actions taken towards increasing women’s empowerment, and an opportunity for interested companies to connect with United Nations agencies and non-governmental organizations and explore possible collaborations. The Forum’s opening session featured Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon and Academy Award-winning actor and activist, Geena Davis.

62. The United Nations Office for Partnerships and the Business Civic Leadership Center co-hosted a similar Forum on 8 March 2012 entitled “The role of business in empowering women”. Assistant Secretary-General and Deputy Executive Director of UN-Women, Lakshmi Puri, delivered the keynote remarks and urged Governments and businesses to work together to improve gender equality, which is economically and socially advantageous for both.

IV. Conclusions

63. Mr. Turner's historic philanthropic contribution through the United Nations Foundation and UNFIP has resulted in an exponential increase in interest from non-State actors, including foundations and private companies, in pursuit of engagement and collaboration with the United Nations. As noted in paragraph 2 above, this has already yielded over $700 million in co-financing from such sources as the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, the American Red Cross, The Rotary Foundation of Rotary International and The Vodafone Foundation. The United Nations Foundation continues to actively mobilize funding from third-party sources in support of the work of the United Nations and its causes.

64. The United Nations Democracy Fund is now six years old and has proved to be an excellent initiative by the General Assembly. It has successfully complemented the work of many United Nations agencies that concentrate on the "supply" side of democratic institutions by focusing on the "demand" side through grants to local civil society organizations. With almost 3,000 applications received in 2011, the Fund supports democratization efforts around the world and over the years has become a critically important resource for civil society, particularly in the global South.

65. While the operations of UNFIP and the United Nations Democracy Fund remain the core work of the United Nations Office for Partnerships, the Office has continued to provide advisory services to a wide range of non-State actors that seek to partner with the United Nations system. On 25 January 2012, Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon announced that a new mechanism will be built to scale up United Nations capacity to mobilize the formidable resources of the private sector, civil society, philanthropists and academia across a broader range of issue areas.
