INTRODUCTION

History of the Commission

The Conference of Allied Ministers of Education (CAME) was working in London from 1942 to 1945. During the discussions the idea of an international organization for education was conceived. In further discussions and negotiations held at the same time between the Allied Powers, this organization was to become a specialized agency within the larger system of United Nations organizations. This was provided for in Article 57 in the Charter of the United Nations adopted in San Francisco on 26 June 1945.

The Conference for the Establishment of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (ECO/Conf.) convened in London by the British and French Governments, adopted on 16 November 1945 the Unesco Constitution and an Instrument establishing A Preparatory Educational, Scientific and Cultural Commission, called for short, Preparatory Commission of Unesco. Its task was

1. to convoke the first session of the General Conference;
2. to prepare the provisional agenda for the first session and prepare documents and recommendations relating to the agenda;
3. to make studies and prepare recommendations concerning the programme and budget;
4. to provide without delay for immediate action on urgent needs of educational, scientific and cultural reconstruction in devastated countries.

The Commission held in all six sessions and it consisted of one representative, later called delegate, of each of the Governments signatory to the Instrument; 43 countries signed the Instrument before the dissolution of the Commission. The Commission appointed an Executive Committee of fifteen Members<sup>1)</sup> and an Executive Secretary under whose direction an international staff was to work. By October 1946 there were 167 staff members. (see references to staff lists in the annex).

The appointment of a special technical sub-committee to examine the needs of the countries devastated by the war was already foreseen in the Instrument, and there were eight programme committees and five other committees or subcommittees in existence in all during the preparatory period of Unesco (see the list of documents, p. )

In the first plenary meeting of the Commission the Rt. Honorable Ellen Wilkinson, Minister of Education of Great Britain, was elected as the President of the Commission and the post of the Executive Secretary was held from 1 March 1946 by Dr. Julian Huxley until he was elected first Director-General of Unesco on 6 December.

In London, the offices of the Commission were situated first from January to May at 49, Grosvenor Square and then at 46 and 47, Belgrave Square and after the move to Paris on 16 September, the Commission and its staff were housed in the Hotel Majestic, 19, Avenue Kléber (the house had been originally the residence of Queen Isabelle II of Spain from 1868, then after reconstruction, a hotel from 1908. It was used during the last war by the occupying power, then by the American Army and finally it became an international conference centre of the French Foreign Ministry when Unesco moved in 1958 to its new headquarters, Place de Fontenoy).

On 4 November, Greece became the twentieth country to ratify the Constitution and by this act Unesco came legally into being. The first session of the General Conference opened on 20 November in Paris with a solemn ceremony at the Sorbonne. The Conference worked until 10 December in the Hotel Majestic. Upon the election of the Director-General on 6 December the mandate of the Preparatory Commission expired and the Commission was dissolved, but its staff continued to work as the Secretariat of Unesco under its chief administrative officer, the Director-General.

Archives

The archive group no. 3, the Preparatory Commission (Prep.Com. 16.11.1945 - 6.12.1946) occupies 9 linear metres of shelving in the Unesco Archives. Documents and records of meetings are bound in 15 volumes and there are in addition 17 boxes and units of unbound documents. (2nd copy).. 14
Correspondence files with mail registers comprise 50 boxes and units.

The archives of the Commission can be divided, consequently, into two main parts: documents and files. The documents, by their nature as working tools of the Commission members, Member Governments and the Staff, exist, naturally, in several copies and were distributed to all those mentioned above. They should also be available in the Archives of the Member Governments of those years. The archives copies of Unesco were checked, listed and bound under the supervision of Mr. Jan Opocensky, a former Delegate of the Commission, then Member of the Executive Board from 1946-1948, and the Archivist of Unesco from 1949-1957.

The correspondence of the Commission and its Executive Secretary are filed in blue folders according to a filing plan of British origin with numerical, partly alpha-numerical numbering of the files with a three level classification (for example: 9/1/112 Secretariat - final organization).. It should be noted that documents were often put into the files too; see, for example, files 6/1 Committees and note, p. IX.

Languages of documents

The official working languages of the Commission were English and French and therefore most documents, including meeting records, exist in both languages. There are, however, fewer documents in French than in English; for details, see the list of documents.

Microfiches

Documents in English have been reproduced on microfiche; there are in all 70 fiches, for microfiche numbers see the list on p. ~~VI~~ - ~~IX~~. In addition, the working documents containing the proposals for the programme and budget of the new organization submitted to the first General Conference exist on microfiche, see the annex.

- 1) The word 'document' in our days is used to designate all kind of records whether written, printed, photographic or machine-readable. Here, however, it is used in a restricted sense, in the same sense as it is used in the Unesco Manual, to mean duplicated (roneoed, processed, reproduced) or printed documents, which usually have a code and a number and which roughly speaking form a category between the correspondence and the printed books.

Finding aids

In addition to this inventory which contains detailed lists of documents and files, other working tools at Unesco at the disposal of research workers are:

Subject index of documents(in French)

Name and subject index to the correspondence files

This card index refers firstly to the correspondence of the Commission: governments, institutions, organizations and individual persons and secondly to subject matters dealt with in the correspondence; references are to individual letters

Mail register

Chronological register-book of letters received between 21 March - 17 December 1946; letters after that date should, in principle, be filed in the Unesco Secretariat files (registry files); file numbers of individual letters indicated

Note

It is important to note that copies of documents were often put into files, too. In some cases there is no reproduced document in existence, and in a few cases the existing original typescript has been bound with the documents; in other cases the original is to be found in the file, as for example in the case of the minutes of proceedings of the Fine Arts Committee (file 6/12/141). Therefore, it is important to consult both the documents and files.
