3. Acknowledging the many international commitments to increase efforts to improve education and/or gender equality in the science, technology, and engineering sectors as an important avenue for sustainable development, including inter alia: Goals 4 and 5 of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development; the 1995 Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action; the Education 2030 Framework for Action, emphasizing that a “focus on quality and innovation will also require strengthening science, technology, engineering and mathematics education” (para. 22); and the Addis Ababa Action Agenda of the Third International Conference on Financing for Development in which United Nations Member States express an intent to “scale up investment in science, technology, engineering and mathematics education, and enhance technical, vocational, and tertiary education and training, ensuring equal access for women and girls and encouraging their participation therein” (para. 119),
