6. c. Description of the organization's activities :

The Regional Resources Centre for Folk Performing Arts, (RRC as popularly known) Udupi, is a unit of the Mahatma Gandhi Memorial College, Udupi. It was founded in 1983 at the instance and with the support of the Ford Foundation and with the concurrence of the Mahatma Gandhi Memorial College Trust, Udupi. The non-governmental, non-profit organization is dedicated to the documentation, dissemination and preservation (by archiving) of folk performing arts, folk rituals, folk games and other cultural aspects of the folk of the Karnataka region.

Slowly, but steadily, the RRC built up a network of scholars willing to help it to conduct field operations in remote areas, thus generating abundant material for its archives, which presently houses a rich collection of documented audio, video and photographic material pertaining to various genres of performing arts like songs, dances, rituals, including forms of tribal lore. Reviewers from the donor institution and discerning scholars, national and international, have appreciated and admired the systematic collections and computerized methods of information accession. A four-phased workshop organized in the years 1988 and 1989 prepared a group of well trained researchers at the Post-graduate and the Post-doctoral level, what with famous American folklorists like Alan Dundes, Peter J. Claus, AK Ramanujan, Stewart Blackburn, Philip Zarelli, Brenda Beck etc. collaborating with Indian scholars of repute. This experience helped the RRC to collaborate with the Nordic Institute of Folklore in launching a Finnish-India Project of intensive fieldwork, thus enriching its collections. The RRC operations have been acknowledged as a most productive enterprise in the field of folklore and folk performing arts. The Research fellowships instituted by the RRC have paid rich dividends in most cases towards the building up of the archives and also in terms of folklore study and analysis. Quite a few of them have resulted in publications by the RRC. The RRC has so far brought out 31 publications on diverse folklore themes based on the materials supplied by the researchers and other individual scholars.

The RRC also undertook the laudable project of educating the common people about the value of the cultural heritage, which they possess, and the need to preserve it lest it should be eroded by the forces of commercialization and vulgarization, which result from lack of proper understanding. By organizing dissemination programmes in schools the younger generation could be exposed to this treasure of culture and by organizing them in communities the common men could be persuaded to cease to look upon their own cultural heritage as useless fossils but to regard them as priceless inheritance. Edited versions of many video recordings have been prepared by the researchers of the RRC which serve to enrich the knowledge of the people about forms of culture which they have not seen so far in their own surroundings.

Coastal Karnataka and its hilly regions have a few distinctive groups of tribals whose society is undergoing significant changes. Their cultural aspects were scrutinized, investigated and analyzed by RRC researchers. An elaborate study of the serpent worship by the Mera community, called Kadyanaata, was undertaken and was published in a volume after extensive documentation. The study and documentation of the life styles of Konkani speaking Kudubis and Kharvis was also carried out under a special grant from the HRD Ministry, Government of India.

Kodavas, being a special community of the Kodagu (Coorg) district with a rich heritage and tradition, RRC conducted a series of documentation trips recording the life styles, customs, rituals and dances of the Kodavas.

RRC has conducted documentation camps in different parts of Karnataka as well for the video documentation of various rituals, folk dance forms, folk healers etc. reflecting the culture and traditions of the people of the different districts.

For comparative study and analysis RRC has conducted documentation programmes in the border districts of the neighbouring States as well

Publications are an extension of the dissemination programme and the RRC concentrated in the last few years on publications on Yakshagana (See under Yakshagana). RRC has published 45 books so far. They represent the basic research in folklore, oral epics, folk rituals, theatre, puppetry and other topics.

During the past ten years, more than 80 researchers from 18 countries (Belgium, Canada, Costa Rica, Egypt, Finland, France, Germany, India, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, Nepal, The Netherlands, Switzerland, Tanzania, UK, USA, Venezuela, Korea) visited RRC and most of them were introduced not only to the collections in general but also to materials relevant to their own research topics. For the period 1984-2007 about 750 serious users of our materials have been listed. If one adds to this certain exhibitions of materials at home and abroad plus travel by members of the staff to domestic and foreign workshops, the national and international impact of the RRC is to be deemed satisfactory.
