Executive Summary

There is currently an unprecedented window of opportunity to support the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) in Indonesia. The legislative and presidential elections in 2004 have brought in a new Government committed to governance reform, the Medium Term Development Plan (RPJM 2004-2009) was issued by Presidential Regulation, the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (PRSP) is in the process of finalization, the level of violence stemming from social conflicts is at the lowest level since 2001 and the economy is showing sustained growth for the first time since the Asian economic crisis. It is in this context that the UN has developed a five-year programme - known as the UN Development Assistance Framework Planning Framework (UNDAF)- to support the Government and people of Indonesia in achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

As a first step in the UNDAF preparation process, the UN prepared a Common Country Assessment (CCA) in Indonesia in partnership with the Government of Indonesia and civil society organizations. The assessment used a rights-based approach and identified 25 key development challenges facing Indonesia. Based on the challenges highlighted in the CCA, Indonesia's first MDG Progress Report, Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (PRSP) and Medium Term Development Plan, the UN and the Government of Indonesia identified three UNDAF areas of cooperation and associated outcomes that reflect the depth and breadth of UN country programmes in Indonesia:

- Strengthening human development to achieve the MDGs
By 2010, improve life chances and livelihood opportunities for all through enhanced Government commitment to the MDGs, institutional support for achieving the MDGs and empowered community engagement in the achievement of the MDGs with a special focus on HIV/AIDS.
- Promoting good governance
By 2010, pro-poor democratic governance is realized with enhanced accountability, capacity and participation in the 10 poorest provinces.
- Protecting the vulnerable and reducing vulnerabilities
By 2010, Government and civil society have better policy, legal frameworks and mechanisms to protect vulnerable people.

In each case, the UNDAF outcome supports a PRSP strategic target and a focus area of the Medium Term Development Plan. Following the 26 December 2004 earthquake and tsunami, the UN has been actively involved in humanitarian and early recovery activities. The UN's early recovery activities have been integrated into the three UNDAF areas of cooperation. In addition, the UN is committed to preparing a UN strategy paper for recovery in Aceh and North Sumatra 2006-2010 that supports the Government's Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction and the newly established Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency for Aceh and Nias. The UN strategy paper will be prepared in 2005 and the UNDAF will be revised accordingly.

Part 1: Introduction

The UNDAF is the common strategic framework for the operational activities of the United Nations system at the country level. It provides a collective, coherent and integrated United Nations system response¹ to national priorities and needs, including the draft PRSP, Millennium Development Goals Progress Report, the Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction in the Provinces of Nanggroe Aceh Darussalam and North Sumatra and the Medium Term Development Plan 2004-2009, within the framework of the commitments, goals and targets of the international conferences, summits, conventions and human rights instruments of the UN system. The UNDAF emerges from the analyses of the Common Country Assessment (CCA) and provides the common frame of reference for the strategy and country programme documents (or other similar instruments), used by participating UN system organizations for development cooperation at the country level. The UNDAF aims to improve the co-ordination of activities within the UN System leading to more effective use of the financial and human resources provided through it and to strengthen the partnership between the UN System and the Government and people of Indonesia.

In consultation with Government, civil society and other development partners, it was agreed at an UNDAF prioritisation workshop that three areas of cooperation would form the basis of the UN systems focus in Indonesia for the UNDAF 2006-2010:

- Strengthening human development to achieve the MDGs
- Promoting good governance
- Protecting the vulnerable and reducing vulnerabilities

These three areas of cooperation were identified as areas where the UN system can work together most effectively to support the MDGs in Indonesia. Strengthening human development- especially education and health -will contribute directly to achieving the MDGs. At the same time, good governance provides the critical enabling environment for achieving the MDGs by allowing more efficient service delivery, improved policy frameworks, appropriate allocations of public resources, reduced corruption and increased participation in development planning processes. The focus on reducing vulnerabilities is a response to the disempowerment and exclusion from decision-making and a lack of access on an equal basis to resources and opportunities facing some of the most vulnerable and marginalized groups in society.

It was also agreed that a rights-based approach be adopted that integrates the norms, standards and principles of the international human rights system into UNDAF programmes in line with the Government's Medium Term Development Plan and Annual Work Plan (RPK) 2006. Each of the three areas of cooperation has an associated UNDAF outcome and each of these UNDAF outcomes are in turn directly linked to one of the strategic targets contained in the PRSP and Medium Term Development Plan focus areas (See Results Matrix Annex 1). The lead Government partner during the UNDAF preparation process was BAPPENAS (National Planning and Development Board). In addition, three UNDAF working groups comprising all UN agencies and line-Ministry Government counterparts were established to provide substantive guidance and inputs for each of the three areas of cooperation. A more detailed overview of the preparation process and the involvement of Government can be found in Annex 4.

The UNDAF outcomes are the specific results that the UN system expects to realize within the time frame of the UNDAF as its contribution towards the achievement of Indonesia's development priorities and goals in each area of cooperation. The UN system is collectively accountable for these outcomes, working in collaboration with the Government and other development partners. The rationale for these areas of cooperation and associated UNDAF outcomes are described in Part 2: Results and Areas of Cooperation, while a description of the strategies and programmes proposed to achieve the expected outcomes can be found in the UNDAF Results Matrix in Annex 1. Part 3: Estimated Resource Requirements, provides an estimate of the financial resources required by the UN system for its contribution to the achievement of each expected outcome in the UNDAF. Part 4: Implementation outlines the overall UNDAF implementation strategy. Finally, Part 5: Monitoring and Evaluation, outlines a monitoring and evaluation plan for the UNDAF outcomes and related Country Programme/Project outcomes and major outputs. HIV/AIDS is a priority² for the UN in Indonesia since 2002 and is articulated in each area of the UNDAF.

UN system support to the Government's Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction in the Provinces of Nanggroe Aceh Darussalam and North Sumatra

The size and scope of the December 2004 tsunami on Aceh province in terms of number of people whose lives were impacted; the Indonesian Government's Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction; the volume of international donations for relief and recovery; as well as the number of UN agencies who are active in Aceh, are all unprecedented and warrant large scale UN system support. Further to humanitarian relief efforts, the UN system will directly support implementation of the Government's Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction in the Provinces of Nanggroe Aceh Darussalam and North Sumatra, in ways that promote achievement of the MDGs and good governance, and mitigate the immediate and long-term vulnerabilities of the local population. Yet the special circumstances of these geographic areas have created new challenges to which national strategies and the UN system must respond, including the development of early warning systems and transparent accountability systems understandable to international, national and local public. Support by the UN to the planning and execution of the Master Plan will seek to ensure that communities participate in the reconstruction process; that use of national and international resources is transparent and fair; and that national and international aid agencies are accountable for results.

In this UNDAF document, the UN systems immediate recovery support to Aceh has been mainstreamed into the three cores UNDAF outcomes described above. In addition, with the formation of the Government's Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency for Aceh and Nias in May 2005, the UN system can now begin to develop a stand-alone, more comprehensive UN recovery strategy for tsunami affected areas for the 2006-2010 UNDAF period. The UNDAF results matrix will be revised as necessary later in 2005 to reflect programmes contained in this UN recovery strategy.

Part 2: Results & Areas of Cooperation

Strengthening human development to achieve the MDGs.

Strengthening human development by providing opportunities for Indonesians to build their own capacities and sustainable livelihoods lies at the centre of the UNDAF strategy. The three pillars of human development- a good education, sound health and sustainable livelihood-supported by gender equity and equality provide the framework for the UN system's activities in this area of support. The extensive expertise of the UN specialized agencies in the core areas of education, health and sustainable livelihoods coupled with the close working relationship and trust built with the Government over the years, gives the UN system a comparative advantage in addressing the multi-dimensional nature of human development. The inter-linkages between health, education and livelihoods with respect to gender equity and equality often means that progress in one area contributes towards better outcomes in the others; the coordination of UN system interventions within and around these areas attempts to take advantage of this win-win factor. Support to achieving the MDGs includes a systematic consideration of environmental issues relevant to health (environmental pollution), education (mainstreaming environment into curricula) and livelihoods (ownership and use of natural resources). As highlighted in the CCA, the decentralisation process is providing both obstacles and great opportunities to the achieving of the MDGs in Indonesia. The UN system's extensive field presence and close relationship with line Ministries gives the UN a comparative advantage in building the capacity of local

² Given the high level of resources available for UN system HIV/AIDS programmes (more than 50 million USD), the well functioning Theme Group and Focal Points Group and the established UN Joint Action Programme on HIV/AIDS.

Governments and Civil society Organizations (CSOs) to more effectively manage the delivery public services. This focus on supporting the decentralisation process is matched by a UN system focus on the poorest provinces and regions; sharp regional disparities in the human poverty index (HPI) appear across and within the islands of Indonesia.

An UNDAF outcome statement linked to this area of cooperation is shown in Table 1 and in turn this supports one of the Government's own PRSP strategic targets and Medium Term Development Plan's areas of focus. In addition, the table outlines four UNDAF sub-outcomes that the UN system will work towards as a means to achieving the UNDAF outcome:

- Sub-outcome 1.1: Increased education opportunities. By 2010, increased education opportunities are available for children and youth both male and female through a more conducive environment to achieving Nine-Year Compulsory Education and the provision of non-formal education opportunities including support to the Government to decrease adult illiteracy to 5% by 2009.
- Sub-outcome 1.2: Improved health and nutrition. By 2010, increased and more efficient use of resources in the health sector has led to improved health including reproductive health and rights, nutrition and environmental living conditions in Indonesia with the focus on women, children, youth and the reduction of the burden of infectious diseases.
- Sub-outcome 1.3: Reduced incidence of HIV/AIDS in high-risk populations. By 2007 the national response has succeeded in slowing the rate of HIV/AIDS infection, (particularly among IDUs) and mitigating the impact of HIV/AIDS.
- Sub-outcome 1.4: Increased opportunities for sustainable livelihoods. By 2010, increased opportunities for achieving sustainable livelihoods in the poorest provinces of Indonesia through the development and implementation of appropriate participatory policies and programmes

A short rationale for the selection of each sub-outcome that highlights UN comparative advantages and links to the CCA is provided in Table 1.

Table 1: Area of Cooperation: Strengthening human development to achieve the MDGs.

National priority or goal: From PRSP, a strategic target- Creating opportunities: “to create economic, political, and social conditions that enable the poor, regardless of their sex, ethnicity or religion to obtain equal opportunities as extensive as possible, to fulfil their basic rights and to continuously improve their standards of living”.
From the Medium Term Development Plan 2004-2009, one of three overarching focus areas: “To improve the welfare of families through the economic and social sectors”
UNDAF outcome 1: By 2010, improve life chances and livelihood opportunities for all through enhanced Government commitment to the MDGs, institutional support for achieving the MDGs and empowered community engagement in the achievement of the MDGs with a special focus on HIV/AIDS.
Sub-outcome 1.1: Increased education opportunities. By 2010, increased education opportunities are available for children and youth both male and female through a more conducive environment to achieving Nine-Year Compulsory Education and the provision of non-formal education opportunities including support to the Government to decrease adult illiteracy to 5% by 2009. Achieving the education related MDG targets requires a critical mass of attendance and quality in education. In 1994, the Government introduced a Nine-Year Compulsory Basic Education Programme, covering six years at primary school (including Madrasah Ibtidaiah), and three years at junior secondary school (including Madrasah Tsanawiyah), that aims to develop this critical mass and equip society with basic knowledge and skills. Whether for going on to higher levels of education or for earning a living, a basic level education provides choices to the people of Indonesia. Indonesia is making uneven progress towards achieving the relevant MDG Target

(MDG 2, Achieving universal basic education, Target 3, ensuring that children everywhere, boys and girls alike, will be able to complete basic education). The number of out of school children in Indonesia is estimated to be two million and the country therefore still clearly falls short of the obligation to guarantee the right to education for all children. The CCA identified the need to increase access to education and vocational training, through involving and encouraging private sector education and a non-formal approach to those with special needs, such as street children, remote communities and the disabled. The latter includes strengthening data collection and monitoring systems, increasing budget allocations, improving the scope and quality of services, and capacity building for relevant Ministries. The CCA also identified areas where standards needed to improve or become more relevant in order to achieve an increased quality of education including the qualifications of teachers, literacy rates and basic education services. The latter two issues are addressed in this UNDAF sub-outcome. Based on the challenges identified in the CCA, the relevant UN agencies, all with long standing and successful working relationships with the Ministry of National Education, have agreed to coordinate support to the Government's Nine-Year Compulsory Basic Education Programme as a means to achieving basic education for all. To support the Government's Master plan for Aceh and North Sumatra recovery, the UN system will support the rehabilitation of schools, basic education, early childhood development, school-to-work transition and literacy programmes.

Sub-outcome 1.2: Improved health and nutrition. By 2010, increased and more efficient use of resources in the health sector has led to improved health including reproductive health and rights, nutrition and environmental living conditions in Indonesia with the focus on women, children, youth and the reduction of the burden of infectious diseases.

Improving the health of more than 200 million Indonesians is a major challenge for the Government. While considerable progress has been made over the last two decades, resulting in gains in life expectancy and reduction in infant and maternal mortality, many problems remain. Of the three health related MDGs (4, 5 and 6) Indonesia is currently on track to achieving only Goal 4, Reducing Child Mortality. Significantly extra effort and commitment is needed to achieve Goal 5, Improving Maternal health and Goal 6, Combating HIV/AIDS and other diseases (HIV/AIDS is discussed separately in the next sub-outcome). As analysed in the CCA, many of the obstacles to achieving the MDGs relate to broader health system issues, impacting on the health of women, children and youth; control of communicable diseases; spread of emerging and reemerging infectious diseases; environmental health; non-communicable diseases and effectively handling issues relating to complex emergency situations. This situation is further complicated by the ongoing decentralisation process, which has increased the burden on local health authorities to manage and deliver health services including reproductive health and family planning services. The UN Agencies working on health issues have a long-standing and successful working relationship with the Government as evidenced in earlier and on-going UN and Government joint programmes in reproductive health and rights and family planning, polio –eradication, HIV/AIDS, immunization programmes, improving nutrition and controlling and preventing/eradicating diseases such as malaria, dengue infection, diphtheria, hepatitis, measles, haemophilus influenzae, tetanus and avian flu. The UN systems UNDAF strategy for health will be to work with other developmental partners to secure a more equitable, efficient and effective health system and the adoption of pro-poor health policies with a focus on the areas identified above as obstacles to achieving the health related MDGs. To support the Government's Master plan for Aceh and North Sumatra recovery, the UN system will support improved access to health including reproductive health services for one million people, including 280,000 women and girls of reproductive age, including vaccine coverage, improved hygiene and nutrition, psychosocial support, mental health services and HIV prevention measures.

Sub-outcome 1.3: Reduced incidence of HIV/AIDS in high-risk populations. By 2010 the national response has succeeded in slowing the rate of HIV/AIDS infection (particularly among Intravenous drug users (IDUs) and mitigating the impact of HIV/AIDS.

The HIV/ AIDS epidemic is accelerating sharply across the country, at the current rate of progress the HIV/AIDS related MDG 6 would not be achieved. Intravenous drug use and commercial sex are predominant factors driving the epidemic in Indonesia today, with both having increasing and primary impact among Indonesia's youth. HIV/AIDS policies are relatively well developed but coverage of HIV/AIDS programmes remains very low, with less than one in ten IDUs and one in four commercial sex workers reached with HIV prevention messages. The UNDAF period represents a unique window of opportunity to slow the pace of transmission of HIV in Indonesia by accelerating outreach to and coverage of these risk populations.

Three synergistic goals have been identified to significantly expand the current interventions, that is, to reduce HIV related mortality among people with advanced HIV infections, focusing on providing appropriate care, support and treatment for people living with HIV/AIDS; to reduce HIV transmission among high risk populations focusing on prevention of HIV infection among the populations where the HIV is most widespread (commercial sex workers, injecting drug users, transvestites and prisoners); and, to reduce HIV transmission among high risk groups and mitigate the impact of HIV/AIDS by increasing private sector work place programmes. By promoting safer sex, condom use and health seeking behaviours among this important bridging population, the spread of HIV to the general population can be reduced.

The realization of this outcome will be directly related to the good governance of the national and local AIDS control commissions, and reducing vulnerability and impact in specific populations, that are addressed also in sub-outcome 3.6. This sub-outcome, 1.3, specifically addresses the technical strategies for 'scaling up' and the vital coordination of support and progress among the key Government sectors, UN agencies and bilateral and others partners. To support the Master plan for Aceh and North Sumatra recovery, the UN system will raise awareness of HIV/AIDS prevention among high-risk populations including the construction sector and ensure that HIV/AIDS issues are integrated into reproductive health, family planning and psychosocial services.

Sub-outcome 1.4: Increased opportunities for sustainable livelihoods

By 2010, increased opportunities for achieving sustainable livelihoods in the poorest provinces of Indonesia through the development and implementation of appropriate participatory policies and programmes

Though the country as a whole is on track to achieve the part 1 of MDG 1, i.e., by 2015 reducing the poverty level by half, some regions will still have very high incidence of poverty; regional disparity in poverty also remains a matter of concern. An estimated 37 million people live below the poverty line according to the national definition³, in addition the number of the "near poor" in Indonesia is estimated to be 115 million⁴. As identified in the CCA, the major causes of poverty and hunger in Indonesia are insufficient budgetary allocations to key human development sectors, unemployment, poor nutrition, unfulfilled basic rights, a lack of adequate livelihood opportunities, gender and culture disparities and the over exploitation of natural resources and hunger. The extent of these underlying causes varies across Indonesia and there are therefore significant variations in poverty levels between the country's provinces and districts.

At the end of 2004, the Government released a draft PRSP document that outlines a national strategy to address the underlying causes of poverty. The UN systems activities in this sub-outcome will support the implementation of the PRSP with a focus on targeting UN system support to the development of local Poverty Reduction Strategies and related programmes at the provincial and district level focusing on food security, agriculture and the environmental management. The UN system will also support Indonesia in its lead role in the global Youth

³ Indonesia uses its own National Poverty line— based on the per capita Rupiah value of an individual's need to fulfill minimum requirements for food (2100 kcal per day), this equal to 118.554Rp per capita per month in 2003 or US$0.47 per day³.

⁴ According to BPS, national statistics office.

Employment Network (YEN) and in the implementation of the Indonesian Youth Employment Action Plan 2004-2007) towards the achievement of MDG Goal 8, Target 16 - “in cooperation with developing countries, develop decent and productive work for youth”. The strong multi-sectoral field presence of the UN agencies in the poorest provinces coupled with effective working relationships built up over many years between UN field workers and their counter parts in local Government and civil society give the UN system a clear comparative advantage in developing and implementing poverty reduction and sustainable livelihood programmes. To support the Government’s Master plan for Aceh and North Sumatra recovery, the UN system will support agriculture and fisheries based livelihoods, food for work and food for assets programmes, small enterprise development (including support to local cultural industries) and business skills training.

Promoting good governance

The Millennium Declaration recognizes good governance as critical for achieving the Millennium Development Goals. The fundamental principles of good governance include respect for human rights, political openness, participation, tolerance, administrative and bureaucratic capacity and efficiency and no corruption. To achieve the MDGs there is a need for political leadership and strong Government commitment to adopt and strengthen good governance systems including measures to reduce corruption. Involvement and ownership of communities, civil society organizations, the private sector and technical assistance from donors are all crucial supporting factors necessary for achieving the MDGs. It is also generally accepted that good governance entails the creation of effective partnerships to ensure that political, social and economic priorities are based on broad consensus in society and that the voices of the poorest and most vulnerable are heard in the decision making process.

Based on the analysis in the CCA and the new Governments commitment to governance reform, the UN systems UNDAF strategy in this area of cooperation is based upon strengthening the capacity of Government to implement a rights based approach to development and support increased participation, particularly of women, in the context of the on-going decentralisation process. The CCA also identified corruption and the need for transparency and accountability as key governance challenges and these are addressed through support to the implementation of international treaties, conventions and protocols, the 2004-2009 National Action Plan on Human Rights and the Partnership for Governance Reform. In addition, the independence of the Judiciary is fundamental in ensuring the protection of the rights of claim- holders, as well as to fight corruption. Through support to the partnership for Governance Reform in Indonesia, the UN system supports the enhancement of the independence of the Judiciary. In these areas the UN system has a comparative advantage in terms of its perceived neutrality with Government and its existing successful governance support (primarily through the Partnership for Governance Reform, which is a close and trusted partner of the Government and the new President.)

An UNDAF outcome statement linked to this area of cooperation is shown in Table 2 and in turn this supports one of the Government’s own PRSP strategic targets and Medium Term Development Plan’s areas of focus. In addition, the table outlines two UNDAF sub-outcomes that the UN system will work towards as a means to achieving this UNDAF outcome:

- Sub-outcome 2.1: Increased adherence to the rule of law and human rights. By 2010, public and private institutions are more effectively adhering to the rule of law and supporting human development through the adoption of rights based approach to governance in accordance with the UN conventions, conferences, treaties & protocols, the PRSP and the Medium Term Development Plan.
- Sub-outcome 2.2: Strengthened participatory and decentralisation processes. By 2010, pro-poor, participatory and decentralized policies and capacities are in place resulting in improved public service delivery focusing on health and education.

A short rationale for the selection of each sub-outcome that highlights UN comparative advantages and links to the CCA is provided in Table 2.

Table 2: Area of Cooperation: Promoting good governance

National priority or goal: From the PRSP strategic target of empowering communities: “By strengthening social, political, economic, and cultural public institutions, and to extend the poor’s participation, regardless of their sex, ethnicity or religion in public decision making which ensures appreciation, protection, and fulfilment of basic rights”. From the Medium Term Development Plan 2004-2009, one of three overarching focus areas: “Establishing democracy and achieving justice for all Indonesians”
UNDAF outcome 2: By 2010, pro-poor democratic governance is realized with enhanced accountability, capacity and participation in the 10 poorest provinces.
Sub-outcome 2.1: Increased adherence to the rule of law and human rights By 2010, public and private institutions are more effectively adhering to the rule of law and supporting human development through the adoption of a rights based approach to governance in accordance with the UN conventions, conferences, treaties & protocols, the PRSP and the Medium Term Development Plan. The Government of Indonesia has committed itself in delivering socio-economic, civil, political and environmental rights as a signatory to key United Nations governance standards⁵ and its adoption of a rights based focused PRSP, which forms part of the Medium Term Development Plan. In addition, with the publication of Indonesia’s first MDG progress report in 2003, the Government confirmed its sincere commitment to creating a governance environment conducive to the elimination of poverty and to making the right to development a reality for everyone. For practical purposes this means that the Government must allocate sufficient resources to delivering these rights and agree to implement its obligations made in the various treaties and national planning documents. The UN system is well placed to support the Government in this area given the UN’s neutrality and its obligation to support the Government in the ratification and implementation of international treaties, conventions and protocols. The areas of UN system support in this sub-outcome are based on analysis in the CCA regarding the status of implementation of UN treaties, conventions and protocols and the rights based analysis of duty bearers and claim holders. Key activities include supporting the Government with the implementation of international treaties, conventions and protocols and the 2003 National Action Plan on Human Rights, promoting increased transparency and accountability in Government by increasing the level of participation in anti-corruption measure and strengthening national capacity to the achieve the MDGs (including through promoting the involvement of the private sector using the Global Compact mechanism). The UN system will also assist in identification of appropriate resource allocations required to achieve the MDGs through support to a National MDG Sectoral Needs Assessment and Plan 2006- 2015.
Sub-outcome 2.2: Strengthened participatory and decentralisation processes By 2010, pro-poor, participatory and decentralized policies and capacities are in place resulting in improved public service delivery focusing on health and education services The 2004 legislative and presidential elections in which more than 80 % of eligible voters participated is a major landmark in the road towards greater involvement in decision-making processes in Indonesia with the resulting potential for more effective, sustainable and equitable development. But it is important to point out that representative democracy does not necessarily mean that the concerns of the local communities or of the most vulnerable in society are taken into consideration in decision making. Poor people are generally excluded from the institutions that put in place plans, policies and rules determinative of their rights and obligations; that make decisions that affect their lives; and which allocate and administer public resources to programs affecting them. Whether it is through inefficient service delivery; through unfavorable policy settings; through inappropriate allocations of public resources away from socially useful goods such as education and health including reproductive health; through corruption; or through the inability to enforce their legal rights- the poor are often the most adversely affected by poor governance and public management. As highlighted in the CCA, to achieve equitable and sustainable development it is critical that participation is strengthened at the local level across Indonesia within the context of the on-going decentralisation process. By increasing the level and scope of participants involved in policy formulation and implementation, accountability and transparency is improved as there is a better understanding of national and local policies and mechanisms in affected communities. The UN system will also support anti-corruption activities that include the need to strengthen legal enforcement to better address corruption cases.

Decentralisation has the potential to make the provision of public services at the local level more responsive to local needs; an essential prerequisite for achieving localized MDGS. Moreover, decentralisation does not only affect Government and the civil service, but is conditional on the involvement of communities, NGOs and stakeholders in the private sector. In this UNDAF sub-outcome, the UN system will focus on supporting the decentralisation process by increasing the capacity of local (and if necessary central) parliaments and Governments to deliver the public services (with a focus on education and health, including reproductive health) required for achieving localized MDGS and increasing participation through support to civil society organizations and civic education programmes. This sub outcome also includes UN system support to the National AIDS Commission to support district and provincial activities and in implementing the “principles of the three ones” (one national strategy, one national authority and one national monitoring and evaluation framework). The strong multi- sectoral field presence of the UN agencies coupled with effective working relationships built up over many years between UN field workers and their counter parts in local Government and civil society makes the UN system well placed to support the decentralisation process and promote participation. To support the Government’s Master plan for Aceh and North Sumatra recovery, the UN system will support the Government’s Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency for Aceh and Nias and strengthen the capacity of local Government bodies, legislatures and judicial systems. In addition, the UN system will support the census process in Aceh and Nias as well as the development of civic education, strengthening of the Provincial AIDS Commissions in Aceh and North Sumatra, and mass media systems.

Protecting the Vulnerable and reducing vulnerability

Vulnerability is a consequence of disempowerment and exclusion from decision-making and a lack of access on an equal basis to resources and opportunities, not only among the poor, but also among groups that are geographically or socially isolated. Vulnerability is mainly caused by circumstances, rather than inherent characteristics. Throughout the UNDAF issues of vulnerable groups have been integrated into the various UNDAF outcomes. However, the Common Country Assessment identified some particularly vulnerable groups whose situation needs to be highlighted and addressed as a priority in Indonesia, these include: women national and international migrant workers; children; indigenous people (hereafter the term ‘cultural communities’ is used in place of ‘indigenous peoples’ in line with the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights own terminology), groups vulnerable to the affects of conflict and populations most vulnerable to HIV infection. The UN system has committed in this UNDAF to supporting the development of a comprehensive legal and social protection system for these vulnerable groups. Where possible, the UN system support under this sub-outcome will compliment the Ministry of Justice and Human rights programme of support to vulnerable groups (i.e. the Ministry’s ‘5 step’ plan which focuses on interventions around institutional development, policy and legislation, awareness raising, standardization of norms, monitoring and evaluation.

An UNDAF outcome statement linked to this area of cooperation is shown in Table 3 and in turn this supports one of the Government’s own PRSP strategic targets and Medium Term Development Plan’s areas of focus. In addition, the table outlines four UNDAF sub-outcomes that the UN system will work towards as a means to achieving this UNDAF outcome in the areas of:

- Sub-outcome 3.1: Reduced vulnerability of children and young people. A protective and empowering environment is in place in line with the Convention of the Rights of the Child (CRC), the World Programme of Action for Youth (PNBAI 2015) and other international and national commitments, which protects children and youth including street children and disabled children from violence and abuse and seeks to eliminate worst forms of child labour including sexual exploitation and trafficking.
- Sub-outcome 3.2: Reduced vulnerability of women migrant workers. By 2010 the vulnerability of domestic and international female migrant workers is reduced and national and local legislations/policies are developed
- Sub-outcome 3.3: Reduced vulnerability of cultural communities. By 2010 policy frameworks in place that recognize the specific relationship between cultural communities and their natural environment, respect the customary rights of cultural communities and create equitable conditions for cultural communities to participate in the country’s development process.
- Sub-outcome 3.4: Reduced vulnerability of peoples affected by social and natural disasters. Reduced longer-term vulnerability to conflict and natural disasters through a shift from crisis response to crisis prevention
- Sub-outcome 3.5: Reduced vulnerability to gender based violence. By 2010, national and local legislation, policies and actions address gender equality and elimination of gender-based violence in line with CEDAW, BPFA, ICPD, other International and national commitments.
- Sub-outcome 3.6: Reduced vulnerability of populations most at risk of HIV/AIDS such as prisoners, injecting drug users, transvestites, women, youth, sex workers and MSM. By 2010 programmes and policy frameworks and/or legislation in place that reduce vulnerability and create equitable conditions for access to basic services.

A short rationale for the selection of each sub-outcome that highlights UN comparative advantages and links to the CCA is provided in Table 3.

Table 3: Area of Cooperation: Protecting the vulnerable and reducing vulnerabilities

National priority or goals: From PRSP a strategic target- Providing social protection: "to give protection and security to vulnerable groups including female headed households, the poor, the elderly, neglected children and youth, people with disabilities and poor communities, regardless of their sex, caused by natural disasters, economic crisis, and social conflicts". From the Medium Term Development Plan 2004-2009, one of three overarching focus areas: "Creating an Indonesia that is safe and peaceful"
UNDAF Outcome 3: Protecting the Vulnerable and reducing vulnerabilities By 2010, Government and civil society have better policy, legal frameworks and mechanisms to protect vulnerable people.
Sub-outcome 3.1: Reduced vulnerability of children and young people A protective and empowering environment is in place in line with the Convention of the Rights of the Child, the World Programme of Action for Youth; PNBAI 2015 and other international and national commitments, which protects children and youth including street children and disabled children from violence and abuse and seeks to eliminate worst forms of child labour including sexual exploitation and trafficking. Half of Indonesia’s populations are children or youth, with 41% of the population below the age of 18 and almost 10% aged 19-24. There are child and youth related dimensions to poverty, education, and health issues. Other elements of child and young people vulnerability include lack of an effective birth registration system, a high incidence of child labour, children working and living on the streets, trafficking of children and youth for commercial sexual exploitation, AIDS orphans who are usually left on their own and stigmatized, forced labour, juvenile justice issues, a high incidence of early marriage, unwanted pregnancy, and child abuse and gender based violence among children and young people. Youth unemployment and underemployment and poor health increase the vulnerability of many young people. The Government has ratified key international Conventions including the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and ILO Conventions on Minimum Age of Employment and the Worst Forms of Child Labour. Other significant steps taken include the adoption of the Child Protection Law and Domestic Violence law, and enactment of Presidential Decrees and National Action Plans on the Worst Forms of Child Labour, Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children, and Trafficking. In addition to these commitments by the Government, the CCA identified the need to strengthen legal and social protection systems and to develop capacity for addressing protection issues. This included strengthening data collection and monitoring systems, increasing budget allocations, improving the scope and quality of services and increasing knowledge among the vulnerable on how to minimize risks and protect themselves. The activities under this UNDAF sub-outcome will support the Government's National programme for Indonesian Children developed in 2004.

The extensive experience of WHO, ILO, UNICEF, UNFPA and OHCHR Bangkok in addressing the various causes and consequences of vulnerability gives the UN system a multi-dimensional capacity to address children and youth issues. To support the Government's Master plan for Aceh and North Sumatra recovery, the UN system will support birth registration, family reunification for displaced peoples and family based care systems.

Sub-outcome 3.2: Reduced vulnerability of women migrant workers

By 2010 the vulnerability of domestic and international female migrant workers is reduced including through appropriate national and local legislation/policies are developed.

Extending rights-based policy and administration to cover all migrants has today become more important than ever. Under contemporary globalization, international labour mobility has increased, while levels of exploitation and deregulation have accelerated. As highlighted in the CCA, the lack of legal protection for migrant workers in Indonesia heightens their attractiveness as instruments of "maintaining competitiveness" because they are obliged to work in situations where decent work conditions are not enforced. Irregular migrants are especially vulnerable because the threat of apprehension and deportation thwarts unionizing and impedes exposure of dangerous working conditions. The absence of regulation reinforces employment of irregular migrant workers in substandard conditions, and provides incentive for shifting capital and employment from formal to informal activity. The on-going successful working relationship between the UN system and Government in addressing the needs and vulnerabilities of women migrant workers provides the foundation for future support in the context of the UNDAF. UN system activities complement the Government's Law 39/2004 on the Protection of Migrant Workers and draw on the Bali Process Ministerial meetings 1 and 2 on migrant worker issues.

Sub-outcome 3.3: Reduced vulnerability of cultural communities

By 2010 policy frameworks in place that recognize the specific relationship between cultural communities and their natural environment, respect the customary rights of cultural communities and create equitable conditions for cultural communities to participate in the country's development process.

The number of cultural community peoples in Indonesia is estimated to be 30 million people, though this varies considerably depending on the terminology and criteria used. The cultural practices of cultural communities play a crucial role in preserving the wealth of Indonesia's societal and ecological diversity. The past lack of acknowledgement and recognition of cultural communities rights and their rapid assimilation into national mainstream society have failed to generate long-term benefits and welfare amongst cultural communities, and often caused the emergence of poverty related to the degradation of their natural environment. Despite the recent promotion of cultural communities integration with less emphasis on forced change and more opportunities for participation, and as identified in the CCA, many cultural communities are still impeded from determining their own appropriate development path in line with their cultural values. Furthermore, the lack of opportunities to achieve sustainable livelihoods and the particular vulnerability of cultural communities requires a specific policy focus on the needs and rights of this group in society.

The neutrality of the UN system, the existing UN systems experience of working with cultural communities, and the mandate provided through the goals of “The International Decade of the World’s Cultural communities” give the UN system a comparative advantage to address this issue. UN system support in this sub-outcome will focus on increasing the participation of cultural communities in decision-making processes.

Sub-outcome 3.4: Reduced vulnerability of peoples affected by social and natural disasters

Reduced longer-term vulnerability to social and natural disasters through a shift from crisis response to crisis prevention

Since 2001, the level of violent conflict across the country has reduced significantly. However, large groups of people in a number of provinces in particular remain vulnerable to on-going and occasional flare-ups of violence mostly caused by social conflict including Maluku, North Maluku and Central Sulawesi, Aceh and Papua regions. Furthermore, the impact of conflict on social relations and the continued atmosphere of tension in many areas have implications in terms of human development and achievement of the MDGs. Drawing on analysis in the CCA, the UN system strategy is based on promoting peace building initiatives and building the capacity of Government to address the underlying causes of conflict including: horizontal inequalities between ethno-religious groups (including cultural communities and migrant groups); competition for land and other natural resources; shifting patterns of political and economic power; and local political dynamics. The perceived neutrality of the UN, as demonstrated for example by UN staff being granted access to Aceh by the Government prior to the earthquake and tsunami on 26 December 2004, coupled with the extensive experience of the humanitarian and development UN agencies, gives the UN a unique opportunity to address sensitive development issues in crisis and conflict affected areas.

In addition to addressing vulnerabilities caused by conflict, the UN system is committed to developing a framework for comprehensive disaster reduction with the Government, as a means to reduce the vulnerability of as many as 6.8 million people in Indonesia who were affected by various types of natural disasters in the last decade. Indonesia is highly prone to periodic occurrences of various types of natural and human-exacerbated disasters, most frequently droughts, forest fires, floods, earthquakes and landslides, as well as volcanic eruptions and tsunamis. In 2003 alone, almost 500,000 people were displaced, over 34,000 injured, and 1,300 killed by natural and man-made disasters. A number of these natural disasters have been generated or exacerbated by human activities, such as legal and illegal logging. To support the Government’s Master plan for Aceh and North Sumatra recovery, the UN system will support the development of community based disaster management systems- including tsunami early warning- in Aceh.

Sub-outcome 3.5 Reduced vulnerability to gender based violence

By 2010, national and local legislation and policies address gender equality and elimination of gender-based violence in line with CEDAW, BPFA, ICPD and other international and national commitments.

Indonesia will need to overcome a number of challenges to achieve MDG 3, promoting gender equality and empowering women. Although the principle of equality between men and women is enshrined in the 1945 Constitution, gender bias can be found in some sections of the legal system and society. The CCA identified a number of issues that disproportionately or solely affect women’s opportunities and vulnerabilities including: high maternal mortality rates; existing social, and cultural norms that disadvantage women. Gender based violence (GBV) in which the woman is usually the victim has emerged as a major human rights issue. Although no reliable data exist, reports suggest that the level of GBV has increased. This is especially true in situations of social conflicts and emergencies. Domestic violence is also prevalent. Other forms of violence may include, under age marriage, dowry related violence, trafficking in women, and forced prostitution.

To achieve this UNDAF sub-outcome the UN system will develop a common advocacy strategy and collaborative framework to highlight these issues amongst key decision makers. The UN system will also support the development and implementation of legislations and policies protecting women and strengthen women’s institutions to implement CEDAW, BFPA, ICPD other international and national commitments. The UN’s long-standing relationship with the relevant Government Ministries provides an excellent entry point for advocacy activities at the national and local levels within the executive, legislative and judiciary. To support the Government’s Master plan for Aceh and North Sumatra recovery, the UN system will support a gender needs assessment in Aceh and the mainstreaming of gender issues key post tsunami programmes.

Sub-outcome 3.6: Reduced vulnerability of populations most at risk of HIV/AIDS such as prisoners, injecting drug users, transvestites, women, youth, sex workers and men who have sex with men (MSM).

By 2010 programmes and policy frameworks and/or legislation in place that reduce vulnerability and create equitable conditions for access to basic services.

The vulnerability of these specific populations is well documented and the UNDAF strategy involves reducing vulnerability by addressing key obstacles such as high levels of urban migration, limited social services and health care services for marginalized groups and those incarcerated. The UNDAF will support efforts to provide marginalized populations with services and goods to promote improved for health and livelihoods as well as to reduce the stigmatization or discrimination against them.

Part 3: Estimated Resource Requirements

The estimated resources required for achieving each of the UNDAF outcomes and sub-outcomes are presented in the Summary Table: Total Resources by Outcomes below and the results matrix in Annex 1. These contributions, currently indicative figures, include both the regular and extra budgetary resources of UN agencies, funds and programmes (i.e. trust funds, cost-sharing, contributions in-kind), which are expected to be available during the UNDAF time frame (2006 – 2010). External funds will be sought primarily from donors, the private sector and foundations. It is important to note that resource commitments can only be made in programme or project documents, according to the procedures and approval mechanisms of each UN agency. Given the increased interest in Indonesia among development partners for improved donor and UN system harmonization, the UN country team will explore fund raising opportunities with donors who may be interested in channeling funding through the UNDAF mechanism. These resource figures include funds from the Tsunami Flash Appeal, which -as outlined in the mid-term review of the Flash Appeal- are to be disbursed by end 2005. The funds are included in this UNDAF because of the scale of funds and level of UN coordination and collaboration involved. The Flash Appeal funded projects also in many cases provide the foundation for future recovery projects in Aceh during the 2006-2010 period.

Part 4: Implementation

The UNDAF will be implemented through the Government-approved country cooperation programmes of the UN agencies, programmes and funds. Individual country programmes and project documents will have explicit links to the UNDAF outcomes, and will explain how they contribute to them. The harmonized programme cycles of individual UN agencies (2006-2010) will enable effective individual and collaborative programming, as well as joint monitoring and evaluation activities. Agencies involved in UNDAF joint activities will explore the possibility of strengthening coordination further through the development of joint programmes if circumstances warrant i.e. where a joint programme would add value by increasing the development impact of the UN system. Where possible, UNDAF activities will be coordinated through existing UN system and donor coordination mechanisms e.g. the HIV/AIDS Theme Group, Consultative Group for Indonesia (CGI) etc. In those cases where working groups are being established to coordinate joint activities, members of the working group will periodically review their group to determine the feasibility of converting the working group (which meets on an ad hoc basis and focuses on a specific joint activity) into a full UN Theme Group (which has a more wide ranging mandate and membership than a working group). In all UNDAF programmes, culturally appropriate materials and programme processes will be adopted to take into account the diverse population of Indonesia.

In the case of HIV/AIDS and providing support to Nusa Tenggara Timur Province, the UN system in Indonesia has developed or is developing a 'UN Joint Action Programme' modality. This is a formalized framework document that coordinates individual UN agency development interventions in thematic or geographic areas. It is easier to initiate than a joint programme as it allows for joint planning and parallel implementation however, it also creates momentum for coordination that can later be used to develop a full joint programme once the benefits of UN system coordination have been demonstrated through a UN Joint Action Programme. The National AIDS Control Commission is enthusiastic about the UN Joint Action Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNJAP), which provides an annual work plan for the whole UN related to HIV/AIDS as well as a six monthly-consolidated report from all UN partners. These can readily be incorporated into the National HIV/AIDS Report. The network of focal points responsible for HIV/AIDS in each agency has been critical to the success of the UNJAP, as has the existence of a strong, well-resourced, UNAIDS secretariat.

The UNDAF will be implemented with a focus on results. Progress made by the UN country team will be reflected in the annual reports of the Resident Coordinator (RC) and annual UNDAF reviews. Coordination and implementation arrangements for the achievement of each UNDAF outcome are illustrated in detail in the result matrices (Annex 1). The provisions of the UNDAF will be implemented through the country cooperation frameworks and programmes of the UN Agencies whose individual country programmes and project documents will specify how they contribute to UNDAF objectives and cooperation strategies.

Part 5: Monitoring and Evaluation (M & E)

The MDG indicators contained in the national MDG Progress Reports provide the overarching indicators of success for the UN system between now and 2015. In addition, for 2006-2010, a set of indicators has been formulated for monitoring progress towards the achievement of each expected UNDAF outcome. The national level baseline data shown in the M&E framework will be disaggregated by province and gender in the UNDAF annual, mid-term and final reports. These UNDAF indicators are in addition to the MDG indicators contained in the national MDG Progress Reports i.e. MDG indicators are not duplicated in the UNDAF M&E framework. For each indicator, baseline data have either already been provided or will be identified. This information is summarized in the UNDAF M&E Framework (Annex 2), which focuses on monitoring and evaluating UNDAF outcomes and related sub-outcomes. The M & E Programme Cycle Calendar (Annex 3) outlines how and by whom outcome achievements will be measured. The M&E programme cycle calendar also includes final evaluation milestones that describe the key stages of preparation, implementation, timing and allocation of responsibilities. A joint UN/BAPPENAS/BPS UNDAF M&E working group will be established to further refine the UNDAF indicators and identify additional indicators-including at the outcome level-as appropriate. This joint working group will also coordinate the annual and mid-term UNDAF review processes.

Monitoring progress towards the achievement of the UNDAF outcomes will be undertaken through annual UNDAF outcome reviews and a mid-term UNDAF review. Lead UN agencies assigned to each joint activity will be responsible for reviewing their UNDAF activities and the results will be consolidated and assessed by an UNDAF outcome review group (one for each of the three UNDAF outcomes). The UNDAF outcome review groups will make annual reports to the UN country team. Field visits, stakeholder meetings, desk reviews and reports will constitute the main monitoring mechanisms and ways will be sought to involve all partners in the monitoring of activities. A UNDAF final evaluation will be undertaken to measure the impact of the UN systems UNDAF development assistance. The M&E mechanisms will be coordinated by the RC’s office. The introduction of the DEVINFO MDG monitoring tool will be a key tool in the M & E system.

Coordination Mechanisms and programme modalities

Sub-outcome 3.1

- 3.1.1, 3.1.2 Establishment of a UN Theme group on Young People. This theme group will support for the availability of national policies on youth; availability of a profile on Indonesia youth; the UN to contribute to the implementation and knowledge sharing of the World programme of Action for Youth. Consideration will be given to the cooperation on joint activities and programmes.

Sub-outcome 3.2

- 3.2.1 A UN working group on migrant women will coordinate activities in this area, chaired by ILO.
- Working through the UN Communications Group, UN Agency gender focal points and the Ministry of Women's Empowerment will develop and oversee the implementation of a common UN advocacy strategy and collaboration network.

Sub-outcome 3.3

- 3.3.3 A action-research programme and pilot interventions on cultural communities will be set-up under joint management by UNESCO/ILO resulting in a report on the situation of cultural communities in Indonesia, experiences learnt, specific development challenges and the opportunities including an inventory of Cultural communities knowledge systems and practices in pilot sites as a tool for poverty reduction and potential non-tangible cultural world heritage nomination.
- Under a single management structure, UNESCO and ILO will implement a pilot programme targeting poverty reduction for specific cultural communities

Sub-outcome 3.4

- 3.4.1 Until end- 2005, coordination of international assistance (UN, NGOs and donors) in crisis affected areas through forums supported by UN-OCHA. With phase-out of OCHA country presence, successor coordination forums will be arranged with focus on thematic discussions on approaches, lessons and best practices related to promoting peace and conflict prevention. UN Project Coordination Offices (UNPCOs) in crisis-affected areas (Maluku, North Maluku, Central Sulawesi, Aceh, NTT) will continue to support local Governments (BAPPEDA / SATKORLAK) in coordinating international assistance, though focusing on shift from relief to development coordination.
- 3.4.2 Coordination of these mainstreaming activities will be done through the monthly UNCT meetings
- 3.4.3 UN Common Action Plan for East Timorese Refugees and host communities developed as part of the proposed UN Joint Action Programme for NTT Province (see UNDAF outcome 1)
- 3.4.4 UN support to shelter provision in Aceh will be coordinated through the Shelter sector working group in Aceh and the Government coordinating body for Aceh- BRR
- 3.4.5 UN Disaster Management Team (UNDMT) to be reconstituted and to serve as focal point for UN liaison with Government on disaster reduction efforts (including preparedness and prevention), as well as to support information exchange and coordination of disaster response efforts. Coordination of activities will be done through the UNCT Working Group on Aceh, led by UNESCO in the case of early warning systems

Sub-outcome 3.5

- 3.5.1 The UN communications group will develop a coordinated communications strategy on women's issues in consultation with the Ministry of Women's Empowerment
- 3.5.2 Coordination of activities will be done through the UNCT Working Group on Aceh

Sub-outcome 3.6

- 3.6.1 The prime coordination mechanism in the UN system is the UN Theme group on HIV/AIDS, which is supported by a separate HIV/AIDS Focal Point Working Group as well as thematic working groups that meet on an ad hoc basis (Youth, IDU, private sector and treatment, care and support). These UN modalities interact at many points with the parallel structures in the National and Provincial AIDS Commissions. The UN Joint Action Programme is the framework of the UN response and twice-yearly reports ensure that all stakeholders are informed about the UN's activities. The Friends of UNAIDS is a donor forum donor that will also be involved
