

unesco

Member
Global Network of Learning Cities

The City of Melton became the first accredited UNESCO Learning City in Australia in 2014 and remains only one of three to this day. We are very proud of our ongoing achievements in promoting lifelong learning and education throughout our community.

Last year, together with neighbouring Wyndham City, we co-hosted the second Global Learning Festival. With the participation of cities from around the world, we delivered more than 95 online events over four days. The festival displayed inclusive and far-reaching lifelong learning themes whilst also promoting resilience, curiosity, and the importance of continuing education.

Council recognises the importance of lifelong learning as a key to developing green, healthy, equitable and inclusive communities, providing opportunities for meaningful employment and entrepreneurship. We are committed more than ever to education and learning, the keys to successful economic recovery and sustainable growth.

Cr. Goran Kesic, Mayor of the City of Melton, Australia

